MAN'S PHOTOS FOUND IN SLAIN GIRL'S DESK SPUR HUNT OF POLICE

BLOODY SHIRT CLEW IS ONLY FALSE LEAD

Suspect Proves Stains Resulted From Auto Accident Hurts.

ALIBI OF ARCHITECT DECLARED IRONCLAD

Friends of Victim, Grilled Again, Deny Knowledge of Any Romance.

Snapshots of a man found in the Navy Department desk of the slain Mary Baker have heightened the hopes of police in their search for "the man with the gray cap" who police believe threw the bruised and bullet-punctured body of the girl near a culvert near the Sheridan gate of the Arlington National Cemetery.

Commonwealth Attorney William G. Gloth, of Arlington County, and two Department of Justice operatives uncovered the pictures yesterday at the Navy Department desk. Among her personal effects they found a picture of a man whose identity is not yet known, but who police believe may be the mysterious 30-year-old man who was seen beating Miss Baker in her automobile in the Ellipse.

Other group pictures were also taken in which men appeared; but the greatest attention was attached to the picture of the one man. While they were working this clew a tip came to headquarters yesterday afternoon that a man in this city was seen with blood stains on his shirt.

Three Go to Question Him.

Mr. Gloth, Department of Justice men and Detective Sergts. Charles Weber and John Flaherty, of the Detective Bureau, at once went to an address on S street near Nineteenth street northwest. An hour later they returned, satisfied that the man had no connection with the crime.

This man proved conclusively to the group that the bloodstains were caused by injuries he had received in an automobile accident a few days ago. After his explanation police departed to scan again through the letters and pictures they obtained earlier in the day.

Girl friends of Miss Baker were questioned yesterday at the Navy Department. All professed ignorance of any men with whom the girl may have had a romance. None of them could identify the picture of the man found in her desk. Mr. Gloth rifled the personal belongings of Miss Baker and abstracted everything he considered of importance, including her bank books.

Murder Occurred in Arlington.

Out of the maze of stories told by persons along the railroad tracks at Rosslyn police have established that the girl was murdered in Arlington County. These stories underwent a pruning process yesterday and from them has crystallized the knowledge that the brutal crime took place between Key Bridge and the culvert.

All that is needed to bridge the hiatus between the incident in the Ellipse and the audition of the gun reports is the identity of "the man in the gray cap." What occurred in the intervening hours between 6:05 and 10:40 on Friday night is still only a matter of conjecture by police.

Fred Wilson, architect, of Takoma Park, Md., whose solicitation for the welfare of Miss Baker involved him in the murder case, has been eliminated from further questioning by police. Detectives, however, are still checking on the clothing store where Wilson said he bought a new suit on Friday.

Alibi Called Ironclad.

Wilson's alibi is puncture proof, according to police, and is substantiated by others. After Miss Baker failed to keep her appointment with him on Friday afternoon, he left for home That he returned home at 6 o'clock on Friday night and later worked in his garden until dusk, is affirmed by his wife and neighbors.

Later in the evening he was in the company of his wife and friends, police have proved.

Police are inclined to place more reliance on the stories of the Rosslyn residents than in that of the watchman on the Arlington Memorial Bridge, who said he heard shots at 2 o'clock Saturday morning. This lead threw them off the scent until it was discarded as not applicable to the case.

Headquarters men and Mr. Groth have also eliminated Jasper H. Harrell, of Baltimore, from the investigation. Harrell was friendly with the girl in 1921 and 1922 and came to the scene Sunday out of interest and to

In discussing the murder last night Mr. Gloth said it has been established she had been choked, then criminally

New Snowden Budget Laden With Taxation

PHILIP SNOWDEN.

London, April 14 (A.P.).—Facing a prospective deficit of $210,000,000, Philip Snowden, financial wizard of the Labor party and chancellor of the exchequer, today presented to a tense and excited House of Commons a budget bristling with new taxation proposals.

Grdeat Britain's revenue for 1930-1931, based on increased taxation, he estimated at nearly $4,000,000,000, with a surplus of a little over $11,000,000.

Actual estimates were: Revenue, £789,445,000 (about $3,947,225,000), and expenditures, £731,509,000 (about $3,657,545,000). In addition to the total of expenditures, there was the ordinary sinking fund of £50,400,000, to which Mr. Snowden superadded £5,000,000, and a sum of £300,000 for the north of Ireland exchequer.

The grand total of expenditures was therefore £787,209,000 (about $3,936,045,000). This left an estimated surplus of £2,236,000, or about $11,180,000. These figures were officially published in a government "white paper" or official announcement.

In his speech on the floor of the House, Mr. Snowden gave the expenditures as £781,909,000, omitting the sinking fund addition and the north of Ireland exchequer, which were specified in the "white paper."

To meet the unpleasant prospect with which the country was faced on the basis of existing taxation, Mr. Snowden increased the income tax, death duties, super tax and the beer tax.

His announcement that the standard rate of income tax would be increased by sixpence, from 4 shillings to 4 shillings and sixpence in the pound, was the sensation of his speech. It was being hotly debated in every corner of the country tonight.

By this increase, he said, he expected to get £24,000,000 of the £42,000,000 he had to find. He declared he intended to do it without inflicting any extra burden on the poor man. Throughout, his budget was a "poor man's budget."

He promised persons with small in-

TRIO NOW ACCUSED IN KILLING OF YORK

Man Who Notified Police of Dry Agent's Death Held After Quiz.

JURY WILL MEET TODAY

A third negro was charged with murder yesterday in connection with the killing of Prohibition Agent Lamar Watson York in Brooks court early Saturday morning.

He is Milton Walter Guy, 28 years old, who notified Second Precinct police of the murder shortly after it occurred.

Guy is said by members of the homicide squad to have signed a confession that he was at the scene of the shooting, but denies having fired the shot. Following a five-hour grilling at police headquarters, Guy was charged with murder and taken to the Second Precinct. Guy told police that he was expecting a supply of liquor from Logan and Borum at the time of the shooting.

Roy Logan and John Borum are also charged with murder. Borum is accused by Logan of having done the shooting. Borum contends that Guy shot York. Logan and Borum operated a liquor business, according to allegations made by police investigators. York had captured their automobile just before he was killed. Logan and Borum offered York a bribe of $100 for the return of their automobile, according to their confession. When he refused, he was approached by the Negroes and the

SEVEN WASHINGTON BILLS PASS HOUSE

Fund for Children's Tuberculosis Hospital Is Made $625,000.

PAY ACT IS POSTPONED

Allotted an hour and a half for the purpose, the House passed seven District of Columbia bills late yesterday, none of which were controversial. Those that were likely to cause a fight, such as the bill to raise the pay of policemen and firemen, were not allowed to come up.

The bills that were passed were as follows:

A bill to permit the erection of a United Masonic Temple on the Dean tract at a height of 180 feet. The legal limit is 90 feet. Having passed the Senate, this bill now goes to the President for his signature.

A bill to change the name of Iowa Circle to Logan Circle, in recognition of the services rendered the United States in the Civil War by Gen. John A. Logan. This bill also goes to the President.

A bill to increase the amount already authorized for a children's tuberculosis hospital from $500,000 to $625,000. The extra sum, according to experts, is needed to provide the kind of hospital that is needed. In passing the bill yesterday, the House amended it so as to provide for Federal condemnation proceedings if such are necessary. Hence, the bill must go to conference.

A bill to authorize the National

By DON B. REED.

Attracted by the apparent excellent prospects of a Washington victory and by a typical baseball day, 23,000 residents of the Capital yesterday afternoon foreswore other pleasures and duties to join with President Hoover and his official family in the opening of the season at Griffith Stadium.

Sad to relate, the guests on the occasion of state, the Boston Red Sox, proved themselves thoroughly unfamiliar with the ethics of society as they brutally spoiled the occasion by nosing out the Nats in a thrilling, hectic struggle by a score of 4 to 3.

As the result of yesterday's pastiming in the local lot, 23,000 Washingtonians will have the distinction of telling the world that they saw the once-despied Red Sox leading the league. True, only a quirk in the American League schedule brought this condition about, but this morning the Boston Club is at the top of the standing with none to dispute its exalted position. It might be added that no other teams in the major leagues performed yesterday.

President's Throw Wild.

If one were to be scrupulous about the truth in connection with the opening game, President Hoover opened the season with a wild pitch. Possibly his medicine ball practice has thrown him off his stride as a baseballer or possibly the effect of being a grandfather for the third time caused his mind to wander from thoughts of baseball for the moment, but whatever the cause his first pitch would hardly have been a strike in the Epworth League.

Unlike the opening of a year ago, there was plenty of color as the Nats and Sox unlimbered themselves in preliminary practice. Overcoats were few and far between while men often found comfort in their shirt sleeves. The fair sex took advantage of a lazy, but nevertheless warm, sun to display their early spring finery, and many a splotch of red, green and lavender was to be seen in the grand stand. Out in the bleachers, where a dozen forms a crowd on most occasions, some 2,000 rabid fans sat in warmth whereas a year ago the bleachers represented only a blank background against which the batters swung.

Report Shows 10,000 Joined Society in Ten Months. Program for Today.

President Hoover climaxed with a half-hour address last ngiht, the brilliant first day of the Thirty-ninth Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution which held its initial sessions in Constitution Hall yesterday.

Constitution Hall was taxed to its utmost capacity last night when President Hoover, escorted by his military and naval aides, appeared on the flower-decked platform to a fanfare of trumpets and "Hail to the Chief," played by the United States Army Band.

Besides President Hoover on the platform last night were Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, the Acting Secretary of the Navy; Ernest Lee Jahncke and Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, who spoke on "The Constitution of the United States."

Sounding the keynote of the Congress, Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, of Cincinnati, Ohio, president general, in a ringing address yesterday morning called upon the delegates to combat the subversive forces of communism, atheism and unpreparedness seeking to undermine American security.

Soviet Principles Denounced.

Mrs. Hobart declared that never has America faced "the situation that exists today. Across the sea is a land comprising one-sixth of the world's surface and that land has sworn defiance to God, has completely disorganized customary principles of family relations and has brought about an upheaval in industrial conditions. America needs Americans," she concluded. Mrs. Hobart was accorded a tremendous ovation at the conclusion of her remarks.

The first casualty of the Congress occurred yesterday morning when Mrs. James Charles Peabody, of Boston, Mass., candidate for vice president general from that State, fell down a few steps in the box tiers and sustained a fracture of her arm and other injuries. She was taken to Emergency Hospital and given treatment there and it is expected that she will be able to return to the deliberations of the Congress in a day or two.

Mrs. Hobart hurried over to the hospital in the recess between the sessions to see Mrs. Peabody and was greatly reassured when she discovered

Text of Hoover's Address Before D. A. R. Delegates

To the Daughters of the American Revolution:

It is a pleasure to take part in welcoming the delegates from all parts of the country of so great a patriotic association as the Daughters of the American Revolution.

This society was founded in proud memory of the spirit of this nation in its first fight for freedom. The enduring courage, the wisdom and the love of liberty of our forebears who fought in that fight is a most precious heritage. You who trace your lineage back to that gallant group have a right to be proud. On you, by virtue of your lineage, there rest especial privileges and duties. It is your special privilege to tend the flame of humanity and freedom that was lighted in the American Revolution and so to perform that service that the memory of those heroic virtues shall survive in our people. And there rests on you an especial charge and duty that, at whatever sacrifice, that spiritual light of justice and liberty shall continue to guide this people in their relations to all the world. For it is the moral and spiritual inspirations of a nation more than its material progress which will determine its destiny.

As a nation we have grown to a giant strength and power which is so new and vast that we can only vaguely comprehend it. There are showered upon us as a people the blessings of general well-being to a degree which no other nation possesses and that national well-being is more fairly shared among every class of our people than of any other nation. Through the wisdom of our fore-fathers we have inherited a system of life which yields a larger measure of equality of opportunity—a larger richness of opportunity than humanity has ever before discovered. And from this system we have found freedom for ability and character to rise from the humblest condition to leadership, which brings a constant refreshment of the moral and spiritual strength to our Nation. We are content with the fundamental Democratic principles of government which we have evolved and under which we live. We are not blind to its errors and crudities, but Holds They Are Markers Upon Road to Peace Among Nations.

RESULTS AT LONDON CALLED HELP TO ALL

APPLAUSE FOLLOWS POINTS OF ADDRESS

Progress Toward Settlement of Disputes by Pacific Means Reviewed.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover pointed tonight to the London naval conference, the Kellogg peace treaty and the World Court as markers along the great road to peace which lies in the prevention of war. The naval conference, he said, provided actual reduction in armament and strengthened the forces of peace.

'It is an accomplishment that has great material advantages to all its participants," he told the Daughters of the American Revolution in a speech of welcome at the opening of their thirty-ninth annual congress, "but I prefer to have it judged on the far higher grounds of its contribution to the moral and spiritual welfare of our people and the world."

The Chief Executive expressed confidence that the United States would become a member of the World Court upon the solution of contentions over special stipulations under which the country should participate. He reminded the audience that through the Kellogg-Briand pact, this Nation "solemnly pledged ourselves not only to renounce war but to seek means for pacific settlement of all international differences."

Recalls Horrors of War.

"I do not put this duty to you upon a basis of self-interest," the President said, "although it is inevitable that the failure of civilization in any part of the world at once brings distress within our own doors. I have no occasion to emphasize this duty by pointing out the horrors and degradation of war.

"Those who really know war," he continued, "never glorify it. I have seen too much of the tragic sufferings of men, women, and children, of the black shadows that ever run on the heels of war, to wish to recall those scenes. I hope never to see them again. I know this Nation can help to make war impossible and that it should so help."

Ringing applause greeted a statement made by the President in a departure from his prepared address. After that portion in which the chief executive deplored the tragic consequences of war and axpressed a wish never to see one again, he said:

"Let no one mistake me, there is a price no nation can afford to pay for peace." He then continued with his prepared address, "I know this Nation can help to make wars impossible, and that it should so help."

In another departure from his prepared address the President reemphasized the importance of adequate defense.

Tribute to Military Valor.

"Our security today is well assured," Mr. Hoover said, "by an Army and Navy whose high tradition in valor and skill is represented in both the command and rank and we shall maintain them."

Continuing the President said "adequate defense requires forces relative to other nations, but at the same time with no excesses which will create the fear of aggression from us."

The President's statement that the terms of the London conference, now being finally formulated, will bring about actual reduction in armament again brought forth applause as did his expression of confidence that the

DECISION ON PARKER DEFERRED FOR WEEK

Senate Judiciary Committee Lays Aside Nomination to Study Protests.

BORAH IS LABOR CRITIC

(Associated Press.)

Confronted with serious opposition, the nominstion of Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court, was laid aside for a week yesterday by the Senate judiciary committee.

Senator Overman (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of the subcommittee which considered the nomination, submitted a favorable report to the judiciary committee, but administration senators joined in the suggestion to defer action pending further study of the protests of organized labor and Negro organizations.

For the first time, the nomination received some attention on the Senate floor. Senator Overman introduced some letters of indorsement of the jurist in the Senate. Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, asserted that the constitutional provision that presidential nominations be made with the advice and consent of the Senate has fallen into "complete disuse" as he placed in the Congressional Record an editorial declaring this is "illustrated strikingly" in the Parker case.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, was definitely listed yesterday among the opponents of Judge Parker. He voted in opposition to confirmation as a member of the investigating subcommittee. Senator Hebert (Republican), Rhode Island, the other member of the subcommittee, joined Senator Overman for a favorable report.

Senator Borah explained that his opposition was based entirely on the decision of Judge Parker upholding the injunction against the United Mine Workers. Chairman Norris of the judiciary committee has declared against Judge Parker on the same ground, and the opposition of these two formidable debaters is regarded as menacing by the nominee's friends.

Considerable alarm has developed

ALDERMAN LABELS JEFFERSON RADICAL

Educator Lauds Founder of Virginia U. as Glorious World Force.

GIVES LINCOLN'S PRAISE

(Associated Press.)

In a radio address, climaxing the Nation-wide birthday anniversary celebration of the author of the Declaration of Independence, Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, president of the University of Virginia, last night pictured Jefferson as a "glorious, intelligent radical."

"Thomas Jefferson," he said, "may be described as a world force. His name is on the lips of aspiration everywhere, moving men to gain freedom and teaching men how to keep freedom when they have gained it.

Jefferson, in my judgment, was the first great intelligent radical to appear in the political history of this country. Some people do not like the word 'radical,' for it is associated in a menacing way in many minds. But the word is a vigorous word, and means getting at the root of things. Jefferson was an intelligent radical and no other sort of radical ought to be allowed to exist.

"They talk about radicals in Washington and elsewhere. They are complacent standpatters to Thomas Jefferson. I believe many of them mean well, and I respect their spirit, but they do not always know precisely where they are going and he did. He was a glorious, intelligent radical."

Dr. Alderman recalled legislation sponsored by Jefferson which he termed "the deadliest blow ever delivered against intolerance in America," and credited him "as Father of the University of Virginia," with being "in more than one sense the father of all the State universities which play such an important part in the education of the American democracy."

The Virginia educator concluded by quoting Lincoln's praise of Jefferson as one who "had the coolness, foresight and sagacity to introduce into a merely revolutionary document an abstract truth, applicable to all men

U. S. To Approve None But Roy As Haiti Head

Marines May Be Called Into Action Should Borno's Council of State Fail to Select Choice of Hoover Commission and Native Leaders.

The State Department has warned President Louis Borno, of Haiti, that the United States Government will recognize as Provisional President of Haiti Eugene Roy, chosen by the Hoover Haitian Commission with the approval of all Haitian leaders, and no one else.

President Borno, it was learned yesterday, has been told that the United States expects him to cause the Haitian council of state, whose members have been handpicked by Borno and in the past have done his bidding, to elect Mr. Roy next Monday, the date of the adjourned meeting the council.

"The Haitian situation is a little sticky," was the way Acting Secretary of State Joseph P. Cotton explained it yesterday.

Should the council of state fail to elect Mr. Roy next week and thereafter, the situation might well call for direct action by Brig. Gen. John H. Russell, American high commissioner in Haiti, and a Marine officer.

Backed by the marines, Gen. Russell might be ordered to install Mr. Roy in office May 15.

Port au Prince, Haiti, April 14 (A.P.).—After adjourning the council of state indefinitely yesterday, President Louis Borno today published in the official Gazette a proclamation urging the election as temporary president of Haiti of "the honorable citizen designated by the chief of state from a list of opposition group."

The proclamation did not mention by name Eugene Roy, compromise candidate selected under the eye of the Hoover investigating committee. The election in the council of state was to have been held today, but was called off, the president ostensibly desiring to present the election of any other candidate than M. Roy.

The election situation tonight was obscure. An unconfirmed rumor said the council of state had reached an agreement with the president and would be reconvened on April 21 to proceed with the election in accordance with the Hoover Commission's plan.

This would mean the election of M. Roy, but the opposition leaders today were displeased because the president's proclamation did not specifically name him. They have grown suspicious of the president again and are watching his movements closely.

The proclamation stated that in the face of the "precise declaration of the American Government the executive power finds itself under the absolute moral obligation to adhere firmly to the neutral candidate chosen, not being able for a single instant either to assume responsibility

Murderer of Mary Baker Picked Perfect Location

Road in Arlington Cemetery Entirely Unguarded Because It Is in Federal Territory; Hurley Urges Extension of Park Police Jurisdiction.

The murderer of Mary Baker may not have committed the perfect crime—the perfect crime has never been committed, according to criminologists—but he did select a perfect scene for his crime

Had he searched the country over he could not have found a better one. It is a "no policeman's land," this spot near Arlington Cemetery where Mary Baker's body was found; a lonely sector near the Sheridan gate that is only a part of the 46 miles of unprotected Federal territory in that part of Virginia that skirts the National Capital.

The Military road leading from Highway Bridge, over which the murderer must have taken his victim, is a Federal road, under the jurisdiction of the War Department. So is the Cemetery road, near where the Baker girl's body was found.

The Virginia authorities have no obligation to patrol these roads because the roads are Federal territory. Well, then, who is to patrol them? Should the War Department assign the cavalrymen of Fort Myer to do it?

Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley is loathe to do this for two reasons: He doesn't think the citizens would take kindly to it, and, anyway, he says, the cavalrymen are too busy attending to military duties.

Secretary Hurley, however, does have a solution for the problem, and he recently recommended it to Congress. In order to provide protection on the Federal, or military, roads just outside of Washington, Secretary Hur-

50 Planes and 5,000 Boy Scouts Engage in Big Hunts.

New York, April 14 (N.Y.W.N.E.).—With the coming of darkness tonight and the return to their home airports of 50 planes that had participated in a vain all-day search for Ralph White, 32-year-old Curtiss-Wright flying student, who was trapped above the fog Sunday afternoon at Valley Stream, Long Island, hope that the missing airmen ever would be found alive, sank to a low ebb. Fear even was expressed that he had dropped into the sea and vanished without trace.

United States will sometime become a member of the world court.

There are few persons who do not agree, Mr. Hoover said, as to the desirability and necessity of such a court as an addition to the methods of pacific settlements.

Regarding the London Naval Conference, the Chief Executive said that under the terms now being finally formulated there has been brought about an actual reduction "in the armament of three nations of about 25 per cent less than the standards discussed during the conference which failed at Geneva three years ago and a reduction of about 12 per cent below present naval programs as rapidly as the present ships become obsolete."

Pledged to Defense Only.

"But most important of all," Mr. Hoover asserted, "it has been able finally to turn the tide of constantly increasing naval arms and to end the poison of suspicion and ill will generated by constant rivalry in construction.

"We have been able to create a situation where there is neither inferiority nor superiority in the naval strength of the United States. This is consonant with the pact we have solemnly entered by which we have pledged ourselves to use our arms solely for defense.

"We are stronger in defense as a result of the conference. It is an accomplishment that I believe will appeal to the moral and spiritual sense of the American people."

The settlement of the Bolivia-Paraguay and Tacna-Arica disputes are instances, the President said, which have advanced the methods of conciliation.

Turning again to the World Court he said through precedent and treaty "the world is building every year a larger and larger body of international law and practice."

"Statesmen over a generation have realized that with this growth of international law and precedent another method can be contributed to the pacific settlement of a vast number of incidental controversies of justiciable character if the world had an international court to which such cases could be referred for adequate hearing and independent decision based upon law and justice," he continued.

Americans Helped Found Court.

The World Court is such a court, he added, and, established "with the aid of American jurists," has been accepted by 90 per cent of the civilized people of the earth. No other court, Mr. Hoover declared, is practicable.

Every one of our Presidents and every one of our Secretaries of State, Mr. Hoover said, have recommended adherence to that court.

"No one can challenge the patriotism of these ten men, nor the ripe wisdom which is theirs from having borne the actual burden of responsibility for our foreign relations. They have found no entanglement or limitation of the independence of the United States by safeguarded membership in it."

"I believe it is clear that the United States can more effectively and wisely work for peace without commitments to use coercion to enforce settlements," he added, and referred to a statement issued jointly by himself and Prime Minister MacDonald, of England, last fall, which, he said, "made our position clear."

In that he said:

"The part of each of our Governments in the promotion of world peace will be different, as one will never consent to become entangled in European diplomacy and the other is resolved to pursue a policy of active cooperation with its European neighbors, but each of our Governments will direct its thoughts and influence toward securing and maintaining the peace of the world."

SENATE STAYS MUTE ON NAVY PACT STAND

COTTON EXPRESSES HOPE

By ALBERT W. FOX.

President Hoover believes that the real test of the coming three-power naval treaty will be whether or not it will work to check rivalry in naval armaments. And he sees every promise of his belief being fulfilled, according to a statement issued by Acting Secretary of State Cotton yesterday, following approval of its text by President Hoover.

Meanwhile senators, with few exceptions, are awaiting further reports from London before commenting on the prospective pact. Senator Capper, Republican member of the Senate foreign relations committee, was the first senator to comment publicly without waiting for further develements.

"If the treaty coming from the London conference is what it appears to be, the people of the United States should indorse it and indorsement will be registered by the Senate," he said.

Text of Cotton Statement.

The statement issued by Mr. Cotton is as follows:

"Mr. Stimson said yesterday: 'We believe we have successfully accomplished the mission with which we have been entrusted by our country.'

"You will note also that he emphasizes the unanimity of the delegation and the help of the naval experts. The outcome of the conference is of course most satisfactory to this department, and the results have exceeded our expectations. The real test of the treaty is—Will it work to check rivalry in naval armament? There is every promise that it will. I emphasize the point that the three nations, with a full comprehension that naval needs are relative, not absolute, have agreed on their complete naval programs for a period of years openly and with reference to each other."

The reference to naval needs of the three powers as relative and not absolute, coupled with the statement that they have agreed on their complete naval program, has raised the hope in Senate circles that the limitation will not be made contingent upon the French naval building program. The wording of the British contingency clause in the pact will be scrutinized closely here as senators will regard the limitations as definite or otherwise, according to this clause.

Safety Clause Would Please Senate.

If a safeguard or contingency clause, similar to Article XXI of the Washington treaty is adopted, it will be satisfactory to the Senate. This clause was as follows:

"If during the term of the present treaty the requirements of the national security of any contracting power in respect of naval defense are, in the opinion of that power, materially affected by any change of circumstances, the contracting powers will at the request of such power, meet in conference with a view to the reconsideration of the provisions of the treaty and its amendment by mutual agreement."

Such a clause would leave the limitations of the three-power pact binding until the three powers by mutual agreement amended the treaty.

Conference Might Be Called.

Great Britain would have the right to call a conference of the three powers if the French building program worried the British but the three powers would decide upon the question of amending the treaty and the pact now in process of completion would be a binding limitation pact until the signatories all agree to alter it.

But if the British insist upon the right to change the limitations, without the consent of the other two powers, as a means of coping with French naval expansion the limitations in the present pact would not be definite and therefore of questionable value, according to the Senate leaders.

Likewise, if the British insist upon the right to amend the treaty under any circumstances the pact will be regarded by senators as containing a "joker" in so far as limitation is concerned.

we are confident of our ability to cure them.

Because of our geographical situation, because of our great resources and of the American genius for organization, we have, in a sense that no other country has it, security from attack and harm by other nations. We are not only more free from attack, but our people are more free from the haunting fear of attack than are any other people in the world. Because of these blessings, because of our inherited ideals of humanity and liberty, because of our strength, because of our disinterestedness, because of our freedom from these tormenting fears, there rests upon the United States a moral and spiritual duty to undertake a part in securing the peace of the world. Nor does that duty imply any limitation upon our independence. Quite to the contrary, it can only be fulfilled to its fullest measure by maintaining the fullest independence.

National Honor in Kellogg Pact.

I do not put this duty to you upon a basis of self-interest, although it is inevitable that the failure of civilization in any part of the world at once brings distress within our own doors. I have no occasion to emphasize this duty by pointing out the horrors and degradation of war.

Those who really know war never glorify it. I have seen too much of the tragic sufferings of men, women, and children, of the black shadows that ever run on the heels of war, to wish to recall those scenes. I hope never to see them again. I know this nation can help to make war impossible and that it should so help.

It is easy to preach the national duty of helping to preserve peace. It is easier still to engage in invective or vindictive phrase and slogan which stir national selfishness and self-righteousness. And certainly the way of peace lies neither in the rattling of the scabbard nor the abandonment of defense.

These are matters in which you are deeply interested, not in destructive criticism directed to either extreme, of which we have enough, but in development of constructive public opinion—the most powerful expression of our people. Your cordial resolutions in support of Secretary Kellogg in his efforts which brought about the Kellogg-Briand pact are evidence of the desire of your society to promote the peace of the world. By that pact with 55 other nations, we solemnly pledged ourselves not only to renounce war but to seek means for pacific settlement of all international differences. We were sincere when we signed that pact. We engaged our national honor when we ratified it. And in sincerity and honor two obligations flow from that covenant.

Whole World Needs Relief.

First, the conceptions of military strength of nations are reduced by that covenant solely to such strength as is required for defense. And second, we must cultivate methodical procedure by which controversies between nations can be settled by pacific means. Certainly until the peace machinery of the world has been developed and tested over long years we must maintain such forces of defense as will at every moment prevent the penetration of a hostile force over our borders. Adequate defense requires forces relative to other nations but at the same time with no excesses which will create the fear of aggression from us. Such fear will breed animosities, ill will, and a resolution in others to combine to protect themselves, which are the very seeds of war.

All the world needs relief from the burdens of armies and navies, but disarmament can not be made to contribute to peace unless it is conducted by agreement among nations, for by that method alone can we allay fear and preserve security. One of the deeper causes of friction and ill will in the world has been competition in naval armament. Nothing arouses more fear or lends itself more to the creation of distrust among nations. A proposal on the part of one nation to build more ships of war results in instant fear of inadequate defense, ill will, and suspicion in other nations.

In consonance with the spirit of the Kellogg pact we recently made a renewed effort at reduction and limitation of naval arms by agreement. For nearly ten years our country has pursued a steady endeavor to bring about such agreements. The Washington Arms Conference of 1922, while it was but partially successful in this direction, yet by limiting battleships and aircraft carriers it accomplished much and laid foundations for the future. Competition, however, started at once in the other types of war craft, and an effort was made by conference between the representatives of the United States, Great Britain and Japan at Geneva in 1927 to bring it to a halt.

Poison of Suspicion Ended.

That conference failed and competition took renewed and even more dangerous aspects. A year ago we again initiated negotiations and the conference in London during the past four months by patient labor is now assured of success. It has been able to reach a further great and far-reaching settlement, reducing the number of battleships, creating a holiday in their further construction, together with limitations and reductions in the construction of cruisers, destroyers and submarines during the next six years. Under the terms now being finally formulated the conference has been able to bring about an actual reduction in the armament of the three nations of about 25 per cent less than the standards discussed during the conference which failed at Geneva three years ago and a reduction of about 12 per cent below present naval programs as rapidly as the present ships become obsolete. But most important of all it has been able finally to turn the tide of constantly increasing naval arms and to end the poison of suspicion and ill will generated by constant rivalry in construction.

We have been able to create a situation where there is neither inferiority nor superiority in the naval strength of the United States. This is consonant with the pact we have solemnly entered by which we have pledged ourselves to use our arms solely for defense. We are stronger in defense as a result of the conference. It is an accomplishment that I believe will appeal to the moral and spiritual sense of the American people. Through this agreement we have strengthened the forces of peace. It is an accomplishment that has great material advantages to all its participants, but I prefer to have it judged on the far higher grounds of its contribution to the moral and spiritual welfare of our people and the world, for in the long run those are the grounds on which we and all the world must depend for progress.

Road to War Prevention.

The great road to peace indeed lies in the prevention of war. The construction and maintenance of this road requires just as much interest and devotion as the maintenance of defense. The first principle in prevention of war is to guide our national conduct in justice, consideration and kindliness to other nations so as to give no justified cause for ill will or suspicion. War arises from a state of fear, a sense of injustice, and an ill will which culminates in uncontrollable national passions. There are ever present in the world the causes of friction. The far-flung exchange of citizens and their property throughout the world gives hourly birth to large and small controversies; beyond this our generation has inherited a multitude of conflicting interests from of old. These controversies are of many different types; they require distinctly different methods and agencies of settlement. The practical program of the work of peace is to develop and create appropriate agencies for regular methodical disposal and solution of these controversies so as to assure justice and avoid arousing of national emotions.

All civilized nations have developed great skill and experience in their foreign offices whose will and purpose in this century is to dispose of a multitude of these daily incidents without friction. We have need steadily to expand their machinery and method.

The world has greatly advanced the method of arbitration by scores of treaties; it has by such instances as the Bolivia-Paraguay dispute advanced the method of independent inquiry into fact in cooperation with the parties, and by such instances as the Tacna-Arica controversy, have advanced the method of conciliation. The difficulties in the instance of the Chinese-Russian dispute show the clear need of some method of mobilization of public opinion against the violation of the Kellogg pact. By international conference on specific questions, such as disarmament, we have advanced the method of cooperation in settlement of old standing dangers.

Many Controversies Settled.

Through precedent and treaty the world is building every year a larger and larger body of international law and practice. Statesmen over a generation have realized that with this growth of international law and precedent another method can be contributed to the pacific settlement of a vast number of incidental controversies of justiciable character if the world had an international court to which such cases could be referred for adequate hearing and independent decision based upon law and justice.

Such a court—the World Court—has been established at The Hague with the aid of American jurists. It has been accepted by 90 per cent of the civilized people of the earth. It is established, and no other court is practicable. It has demonstrated the highest integrity and capacity, and the continuance of these qualities is assured. It already has settled a great number of controversies. It is only one, but an important one, of the six or seven methods of security pacific settlements and thus a contribution to the prevention of war. Adherence to that court by the United States has been earnestly recommended by every one of our Presidents and every one of our Secretaries of State living since its inception. No one can challenge the patriotism of these ten men nor the ripe wisdom which is theirs from having borne the actual burden of responsibility for our foreign relations. They have found no entanglement or limitation of the independence of the United States by safeguarded membership in it.

Court Necessity Conceded.

And in all the discussion as to participation of the United States in this court there are few persons who do not agree as to the desirability and necessity of such a court as one of the additions to our methods of pacific settlements. The contention on this question rests upon the details of special stipulations under which we should join. It is not my purpose to go into these contentions here. I have no doubt they can be solved and that the United States will become a member of the court.

Mankind has within the past decade given more earnest thought to and made more constructive effort and progress toward the elimination of war than in all previous periods of history. In the broader field of our relation to these many methods to prevent war we have during the past few years participated in an increasing number of international discussions, consultations and conferences, arbitrations and inquiries—all of which represent progress in organizing the world for peace. We shall continue to do so where any important purpose is to be accomplished. And in our cooperation to maintain peace there is one broad policy which I wish to emphasize.

Our role in cooperation is different from that of the nations of Europe. That difference rises not only from our geographical setting but from the nature of the maximum contribution we can render to peace. The nations of Europe, surrounded as they are by dangers and problems of which we in the Western Hemisphere have but little appreciation, and beset by inherited fears, hold to the view that aside from the world court the pacific settlement of controversies and the maintenance of peace should be backed by potential coercion through pooling of either military or economic strength. We do not question their right to come to such conclusions as they see fit to follow arising as they do from their terrible experience and their necessities.

Instinct of Vast Majority.

But the instinct of the vast majority of our people is that our contribution is not to be based upon commitments to use force to maintain peace. This arises both from a feeling that the threat of force conflicts with the purpose of peaceful efforts and from the limitation it might place upon our independent action where we have only indirect interest. We have come to the belief that our contribution can best be made by our good offices and a helpfulness based upon independence from any combination pledged to the use of force. I believe it is clear that the United States can more effectively and wisely work for peace without commitments to use coercion to enforce settlements. Our position was made clear in a statement issued jointly by the prime minister of England and myself at the time of his memorable visit of good will to this country. We said:

"The part of each of our governments in the promotion of world peace will be different, as one will never consent to become entangled in European diplomacy and the other is resolved to pursue a policy of active cooperation with its European neighbors, but each of our governments will direct its thoughts and influence toward securing and maintaining the peace of the world."

Within these principles which are in full accord with the traditions we have from our forefathers, we should hold an open mind and engage in advancement of the methods by which the controversies in the world may find pacific settlement and by which we can cooperate in the prevention of war. For the American people want peace in the world, not alone as a matter of material interest to our prosperity and welfare, but because gains to the moral and spiritual forces of the world are made through peace and not through war.

CLAUSES OUTLINED IN FIVE-POWER PACT

By JOHN L. BALDERSTON.

London, April 14 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—How little there will be of a five-power treaty as distinct from a three-power pact was made strikingly evident at the fifth plenary session of the London naval conference today. The proceedings in St. James Palace showed that apart from the preamble, over which controversy exists, only the following clauses will be signed by all five nations, and if any of these are objected to in the next week they will be left out:

Definition of a destroyer, definition of special and exempt ships, rules for disposal of average vessels, replacement rules to cover ships not provided for in the Washington treaty, a capital ship holiday less two capital ships each for France and Italy, rules for disposal of capital ships, a unit size limit for submarines and gun caliber limitation on submarines.

The plenary session decided that the treaty can not be signed Thursday, but will be signed Tuesday of next week. The Leviathan will postpone sailing for a day in order to leave with the American delegation Wednesday, April 23.

The Italians have finally decided to refuse to sign the compromise on a method of limitation arrived at after three weeks of work by the other powers, so this will therefore not appear in the treaty. Foreign Minister Dino Grandi, in conversations with Secretary of State Stimson and Prime Minister MacDonald, made it clear that Italian opposition is definite.

The compromise between the category and global tonnage methods of limitation will therefore be turned over in its present incomplete state to the League of Nations, preparatory disarmament commission at Geneva.

The so-called "escalator" clause providing for British fears of French and Italian building will be discussed by the committees of jurists and experts who are drafting the treaty negotiated here. It will not provide for a conference of the United States, Great Britain and Japan, as at first suggested, but, as it stands now in the British draft, will be short and simple, stating that each of the three powers, if alarmed at the building of the other nations, reserves the right to increase building above the treaty figures upon giving notice to the other signatories, whereupon the other two will also have the right to build up, but only in the same category and without the right of transfer.

London will be left to the treaty drafting committees for most of next week. Foreign Minister Aristide Briand and other leading members of the French delegation already having gone to Paris; Signor Grandi departing tomorrow for Rome and Mr. MacDonald leaving Wednesday for a brief holiday at Lossiemouth, his fishing village birthplace in Scotland.

Various reports were adopted by the plenary session today as a basis for the treaty, the only new fact emerging from the public debate being Secretary Stimson's announcement that he agreed this morning with former Premier Reijiro Wakatsuki that "a transfer not exceeding 10 per cent of the category into which the transfer is made will be permitted between light cruisers and destroyers." Japan had asked Saturday for 15 per cent transfer rights between these categories and today reduced this claim by one-third.

A curious incident occurred, which was not explained, when Mr. MacDonald, as chairman of today's meeting, presented the unanimous report defining "the characteristics of a destroyer" and moved that it be adopted, whereupon Admiral Giuseppi Sirianni, Italian minister of marine, jumped up and said curtly:

"This point is not of any particular concern to Italy."

Arguments are going on ... preamble of the treaty. The Americans and British would ... ences in it to the Kellogg pact, with some phraseology similar to that contained in the joint Hoover-MacDonald statement after the Rapidan. The French want references indicating that the instrument is intended to prepare the way for a league of nations disarmament conference.

The varying degrees of emphasis which various nations wish to place upon various abstractions render it probable, in my opinion, that the preamble will be extremely short and businesslike and will contain no abstractions. All this, however, is not decided yet.

29 OPINIONS GIVEN BY SUPREME COURT

Chicago Required to Build Sewage Disposal Plants by Diversion Decision.

I. C. C. RATES SUSTAINED

(Associated Press.)

Working with only eight members the Supreme Court yesterday in a four hours' session rendered 29 opinions ranging from personal injury controversies to the celebrated Lake Michigan diversion case.

The court's action on the lake diversion case was to approve the recommendations made by Chief Justice Hughes as special master. He took no part in the decision.

The court in tw ocases emphasized Federal jurisdiction under the admiralty laws over suits for damages arising out of personal injuries on navigable waters, in one declaring that the Pennsylvania workmen's compensation act did not control in such an accident on a boat at a wharf in Philadelphia.

I. C. C. Rates Upheld.

A decision of great importance controlling the rights of defendants in criminal cases to trial before a jury was handed down in a case from Oklahoma City, Okla., in which John Patton and others sought to have their conviction on the charge of conspiring to bribe a prohibition agent set aside because one of the jurors had been excused and the verdict had been rendered by a jury of eleven. The court, through Justice Sutherland, discussed at lnegth the important question and held that, as both the Government and the defendants had consented to the excuse of one juror, the verdict must stand.

The Interstate Commerce Commission was sustained by the court in rates it had fixed on cotton sent to Texas ports, as were laws made by Nebraska regulating fishing in the Missouri River. The court approved a tax levied by North Carolina on cotton mills, and held that the United States had jurisdiction to prosecute a defendant charged with murder on a train passing over the Fort Robinson Military Reservation in Nebraska.

In two cases brought on war risk insurance the court decided that the Government wa snot compelled to pay interest on deferred installments due under the policies.

Chicago Lake Plan.

It consented to review four cases and declined to review eight.

Owing to the time required to deliver the opinions, issue orders and receive motions the court was unable to begin the oral arguments in any of the cases down for hearing.

In the protracted litigation over the diversion of water from Lake Michigan at Chicago the report of Special Master Hughes proposed a plan for reducing the diversion to not more than 1,500 cubic feet per second by the close of 1938.

This diversion is in addition to what the city may jump from the lake for domestic purposes.

All parties to the controversy took exception to the report of the special master, the Great Lakes States making a strenuous effort to prevent any diversion through the Chicago River as soon as sewage disposal plants were constructed by the city.

Financial Stress No Excuse.

The opinion was rendered by Justice Holmes, and there was no dissent announced.

Under the decision the sanitary district will be required to establish ewage dipoal plant by the cloe of 1938, and the financial condition of Chicago will be no excuse for failure to carryout the plan, the Supreme Court announcing that if the State constitution prevents the raising of sufficient funds, the constitution should be amended, because it is the intention of the court to enforce the terms of the report of the special master.

Declaring that the sanitary district is "doing a wrong to the complainants (Great Lakes States) and that they must stop it," the court said the sanitary district and Chicago must find "out a way at their peril."

Choral Festival Group to Meet.

Members of the 200-voice chorus of the Washington Choral Festival Association will meet at 8 o'clock tonight at Thomson Community Center to speed rehearsals for the Washington Choral Concert to be held May 10 at Constitution Hall and to prepare for the program to be rendered in a Memorial Day celebration on May 11 at the Arlington Cemetery Amphitheater.

Social Agencies Work Appraised

Committee Gives Resume of Accomplishments for Past Year.

The work done by the Council of Social Agencies during the past year has been surprising in its scope and technique, Wallace Hatch, chairman of the appraisal committee, stated at the annual meeting of the Council of Socil Agencies yesterday, held at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest. This committee was formed at the request of Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary of the council, to appraise the work of the council during the past year. Willard C. Smith, president, outlined in detail the accomplishments of the past year in his annual report, calling particular attention to the health and recreation survey, study of the blind situation here, and various other surveys and studies sponsored by the council.

Dr. Charles P. Neill, Dr. Frederick W. Perkins, Dr. John O'Grady, E. C. Graham and Wallace Hatch were elected members of the executive committee for a term of three years each, and Mrs. Henry H. Flather was elected a member of the committee for two years.

Engineering Students See Capital Projects

The senior engineering classes of the North Carolina State College of Agriculture and Engineering at Raleigh are in Washington on a three-day tour of inspection of the Government's new building projects as the guests of the Associated General Contractors of America. They were received yesterday morning by President Hoover and are being conducted over the city by representatives of their host organization.

The group yesterday morning visited the Bureau of Standards, and after the interview at the White House inspected the Arlington Memorial Bridge. Today they will inspect the new Department of Commerce Building and the new home of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

G. Bryan Pitts Due In Capital Today

Indicted Former Smith Chairman Released in Bond in Florida.

G. Bryan Pitts, former chairman of the board of directors of the F. H. Smith Co., who was released under $100,000 bond yesterday in Palm Beach, Fla., was expected to return to Washington today. His original plan, which would have brought him here yesterday, was disrupted by his arrest.

The action came as result of the indictment of Pitts on 100 counts here for the alleged embezzlement of $1,136,000 from the Smith Co. Bond was set by United States Commissioner Robert L. Earnest, jr., at Palm Beach.

Tickets had been bought for the return trip in the name of Pitts' butler, according to Nugent Dodds, Special Assistant Attorney General.

PROHIBITION DISCUSSION MUST BE FAIR

The testimony of prohibition advocates recently completed at Washington has been sincere, and as a whole has been largely a general denial that prohibition has been a failure.

Some of the country's ablest men and women, who are unquestionably honest in their opinions, urged retention of the law and, in some instances, cited statistics intended to show its benefits.

Edward Keating, editor of a labor newspaper, described prohibition as a boon to labor, but admitted his report was contrary to that of the American Federation of Labor.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, President of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, and Alonzo Stagg, Director of Athletics at the University of Chicago, asserted our young people were better off under prohibition. Mr. Stagg even said drinking was not a problem at the University of Chicago and that only a "small percentage" of the students drank at all. He must have had in mind only his athletic teams during training seasons because the editor of one University of Chicago student publication said that approximately 40 per cent. of the boys and girls at that institution drank. The editor of another Chicago publication cited cases of students and fraternities being disciplined for drinking, and told how in 1927 the University authorities had complained of the ease with which liquor was obtained in the vicinity; and both Dr. Poling and Mr. Stagg were answered by the polls taken in fourteen other colleges. In these polls 15,000 of 24,000 students admitted they drank. At Princeton 79 per cent. of the students who voted made this admission, at Amherst 73 per cent., at Yale 71 per cent. and at Harvard 74 per cent. At the University of Michigan 305 of 902 girl students admitted they drank. Plainly we ought to promote temperance in the colleges as well as in the country. Also, plainly, the present prohibition law has failed to do it; and the students in all these colleges, who are being educated for the duties and the responsibilities of citizenship, have voted, as have a majority of persons participating in the Literary Digest poll, for some change in the present prohibition law.

Mrs. Frank C. Porter, wife of a Yale professor, testified that drinking at Yale was not "a circumstance now to what it was before prohibition," but the Yale "News" showed that between 1906 and 1910 only 59 per cent. of the senior class drank while now 71 per cent. of all classes drink. One other lady, Mrs. Lewis Jerome Johnson, wife of a Harvard professor, asserted she had never seen a drinking student since 1920. Nevertheless 65 per cent. of Harvard students who voted admitted they drank. The figures were 2,646 drinkers and 914 non-drinkers.

Our colleges in a large measure reflect the life of the country and follow the example set by the country. Temperance is desirable for the whole country. How can we attain it? Prohibition has not brought it after ten years, for even George W. Wickersham, Chairman of the Law Enforcement Commission, after making the remarkable statement on March 17 that prohibition was being better enforced than any other Federal law, admitted a week later that "human appetite is widespread," that importations of liquor into the United States and diversions of alcohol had increased during the past year, and advocated changing the Jones law because it was too severe and "contrary to sound legislative policy."

E. C. Drury, a former Prime Minister of Ontario, testified government liquor control there was a failure. But in Ontario his statements were disputed and Premier Ferguson said this: "Drury campaigned against government control and lost. He made similar charges during the last election here, but Ontario electors knew the truth and did not listen to his statements. Now he goes to Washington and tells about a demoralized province. The same statements here would be greeted with laughter. The best evidence of satisfaciton of the public of Ontario as to the law is shown in the last election. The province repudiated Mr. Drury's policy and returned 92 supporters of the government out of a total of 112 members in the legislature."

Do not the many polls taken in the United States, including those of the Literary Digest and at the colleges, indicate that a large percentage of our people, and surely in some States a majority, are dissatisfied with the present prohibition law and want some change in it?

Of course no one wants the return of the saloon, even though speakeasies in many sections of the country are more numerous and as bad as or worse than the old saloon.

But would not the country be better off if we admitted, as the votes in many States show, that a great body of our citizens do not want the present prohibition law, and we agree to some changes which would satisfy the States which want changes? Is not a law which a great number of people in many States feel is an infringement on their private lives contrary to sound legislative policy?

The Congressional Judiciary Committee has acted fairly in giving both sides an equal opportunity to testify. All citizens and all newspapers should act with equal fairness in the discussion of this question to help solve this most important problem so that out of this may come a law which will have the good will and support of the American people.

TWO PRIMARIES DUE FOR INQUIRIES FIRST

Illinois and Pennsylvania Are Slated for Initial Senate Quiz.

NYE OUTLINES HIS PLANS

(Associated Press.)

The Illinois and Pennsylvania senatorial contests were marked yesterday by Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, the newly appointed chairman of the Senate campaign funds investigating committee, for first consideration by his group.

Taking over the chairmanship proffered by Vice President Curtis, the North Dakotan called a meeting of the committee for Wednesday and announced, "I mean to see the committee go to the very bottom of such election controversies as present themselves."

Complaints already are on hand from Illinois, Pennsylvania and Nebraska, Senator Nye said, adding that the Illinois senatorial contest in which Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick defeated Senator Deneen for the Republican nomination "offers the first invitation for study."

Both Sides Involved.

The protests in Illinois, he asserted, involved both sides in the McCormick-Deneen contest. While leaving the plan of investigation up to the committee, Senator Nye said he would have no hesitancy about inquiring into the Pennsylvania senatorial battle between Secretary Davis and Senator Grundy before the primary is held May 20.

In naming Senator Nye as chairman of the investigating committee to take the place of Senator Johnson (Republican), California, who declined the post, Vice President Curtis also announced that Senator Dill (Democrat), Washington, will fill the place originally assigned to Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada.

The make-up of the committee follows: Nye, Goldsborough, Maryland, and Patterson, Missouri, Republicans, and Dill, and Wagner, New York, Democrats.

Ordered on Norris' Motion.

The inquiry was ordered by the Senate upon motion of Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska. Senator Nye said he wanted a comprehensive survey of all States in which any complaints are made of excessive expenditures by senatorial candidates and if necessary he intended to divide the committee work.

In taking over the chairmanship, the North Dakotan said he appreciated that the job is one "requiring full and complete attention." The chairman is a newspaperman and gained experience in investigation work as chairman of the Senate lands committee which studied the naval oil reserve leases.

"I mean to see the committee go to the very bottom of such election controversies as present themselves, believing as I do that the influence of money in election campaigns constitutes one of the most vicious and dangerous enemies of free and democratic government," he said.

Confidence Felt in Aids.

"I have no misgivings over the tremendous work involved but feel that the personnel of the committee is such as will make possible a division of the responsibilities in a way to lessen each individual load."

The chairman was author of the resoluton to deny Senator Grundy, of Pennsylvania, his seat because of his participation in the $2,000,000 Pennsylvania primary of 1926 in behalf of Gov. Fisher, who named him to the Senate.

However, he said he would not let that contest become involved in the forthcoming investigation.

Senator Nye belongs to the group of Western independents in the Senate. The committee make up thus will include two Republican regulars, two Democrats and an Independent.

CHAPTER XXIV.

His First Attempt at Singing.

The summer of 1923 a group of us under the direction of Peter Arno, the famous artist whose clever drawings adorn the New Yorker, played for Gilda Gray at the Rendezvous, taking the place of the Cornell Collegians, who had gone to Long Island during the summer. I bumped into Wiedoeft several times, and he was always kind and courteous. Even though he had already told me all I wanted to know, it was still an inspiration to meet him, and, of course, I was helped considerably when he played even a few measures for me of some solo or other. I also met Don Clark, first saxophonist with Whiteman, whom I have mentioned before. He was likewise a great friend and admirer of Wiedoeft's and owed much of his development to Wiedoeft, as they had both begun at practically the same time in California. Don was very wonderful to me and gave me considerable help. He has since retired and I count him among my stanch friends and one whose friendship I hope I never lose.

I saw Wiedoeft just before I underwent the second operation on my side and he wished me the best of luck.

Accepts London Offer.

Then came another year, 1924, at Yale, a summer in Maine with a Boston orchestra, and the final acceptance of the London offer, which had been continually forced on me ever since I had rejected it.

While in London (September, 1924, to June, 1925) I instructed over 50 pupils, implanting in them the Wiedoeft method and ideas and holding Wiedoeft—and his records—up before them as my god, who should be theirs.

I returned in July, and played again in Maine. It was in Maine that I first did a little singing. The summer of 1924 and the summer of 1925, for no reason at all, I had taken it upon myself to sing such numbers as "St. Louis Blues," "I Ain't Got Nobody" and several other songs. The summer of 1924 I had played with a small society orchestra and most of the times that I sang the crowd gathered around to listen to the words which seemed to fascinate them. Although they applauded me heavily I never thought any more about attempting to feature myself as a vocalist.

When I returned to Yale the orchestra with which I had been playing threw cold water on my vocal efforts. Although they considered me a capable saxophonist, it was immaterial to them whether I attempted to sing or not, and as no one ever asked me my megaphone remained unused. This I can readily understand, as after all my voice is not strong and at most of the affairs we played the crowd was very noisy. Society chatters while it dances, and my vocal efforts were practically wasted on the air.

Thanked by Wiedoeft.

After I returned from London I met Wiedoeft and this time it was he who thanked me for publicizing him in England, as the publishers there had told him that I had caused an increasing demand for his records and solos. He asked me if I thought he would go well in England. Feeling that I had sown the seed for his personal appearance I advised him by all means to appear there. He did so a year later and was very well received.

I continued to practice, though not quite so steadily as before, since it gradually began to dawn on me that even the world's greatest saxophonist was not overpaid, and that a business career in South America, with a knowledge of Spanish and English, might mean more of a fortune than all the soxophonic skill in the world.

The following summer I was in vaudeville with a group of Yale boys whom I did not lead; I was just the saxophone soloist playing one of Wiedoeft's solos and simple encores like "Kiss Me Again." The following fall the greatest of my collegiate ambitions was realized: I led the Yale band in the big bowl. I organized a saxophone quintet which played "Bye, Bye, Blackbird," and various other songs and received a tremendous ovation. That fall I appeared as saxophone soloist at one of the local theaters.

After graduation I once more did a tour of vaudeville with the Yale Collegians, though this time I did not play saxophone solos, but sang the lead in a trio and played first sax in the orchestra.

Played With Bands in Boston.

Following the break-up of the act in September, when the rest of the students reentered Yale, I played in New Haven at the arena during a "Radio Week," with the orchestra with which I had been associated while in Yale. Here I got my first glimpse of the great McNamee. As there were no radios at Yale, it had never been my good fortune to "listen in" except once, to a big prize fight. But I knew that McNamee was a man greatly admired throughout the United States for his ability to broadcast sporting events, and I was as much charmed by his wonderful personality as any of those present in the arena the night of the radio show that he appeared. Little did I realize then just what radio was to do for me.

I went next to Boston in the fall of 1927, where I played with several bands. But realizing that the field was too limited I transferred to New York, hoping to find work. I have already written of meeting my boys and our climb to popularity. I have also mentioned that one of the greatest happinesses came to me at the height of our vaudeville success. During the week we played Flushing in Keith vaudeville it was my good fortune not only to bring my idol, Rudy Wiedoeft, on the stage to acknowledge public acclaim, but to have a dinner cooked at his home in Flushing by his very capable wife and to sit for pictures taken of the both of us playing together.

Wiedoeft Visits Home Town.

Two years previously, while on a tour for Publix Theaters he had played Portland, Me. I had notified my father of his coming; father had met him on his arrival and seen to it that Wiedoeft had everything he needed for comfort. He was kind enough to come out to our little home town as soloist for the Kiwanians, something which I doubt his contract permitted him to do, and something which money could not have made him do unless he wished to. My sister had the honor of accompanying him and that clipping is stuck away in my scrapbook to remind me of one of the brightest spots in my life.

My little brother met him after his last show and the night he soloed in Westbrook and brought him out again to our home where mother had prepared a big feast. Many of the neighbors came in while Wiedoeft entertained them with the jokes and tricks for which he is also well known. Today Wiedoeft is still the greatest of them all.

He has opened a studio where he accepts only advanced pupils, and how lucky are those who are fortunate enough to be accepted by him! I count myself as one of his first pupils, and a letter from him saying that I am is one of my most prized possessions. He gave it to me shortly after I had returned from London, in gratitude for the work I had done for him there, and I feel so happy in the thought that I have been able in some little way to reflect some of my popularity upon this accomplished saxophonist who did so much for me.

Inspiration From Book.

At this time I received a great deal of inspiration from a book called "The Guarded Heights"—in my day dreams I often pictured myself in the role of the hero. However, it was Wiedoeft who was my greatest inspiration.

It was he who inspired me to work over my saxophone, which in turn helped me to put myself through school and win friends and which eventually brought me the opportunity to lead my own band; and this, in turn, led to the discovery that my voice was suited to broadcasting and that my ideas on the presentation of simple dance music with song were ready for a warm reception by a public tired of raucous noise and discordant sounds.

COUNTY HEALTH UNIT WILL AIR HOG ROW

BOY CAUSES BARN FIRE

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 919-J-1.

The best methods of raising and feeding swine loomed as the momentous question the Fairfax County Health Board will have to consider this morning. At the same time the board must reach a decision that will satisfy both hog raisers and their neighbors, who claim these farms are a menace to public health because hogs are fed on garbage in an unsanitary manner.

Last week the health board passed a set of tentative regulations governing raising and feeding of hogs and immediately the farmers protested. They claimed the regulations as they now stand are too stringent and impracticable, especially the daily flushand of the concrete platforms and building septic tanks.

Dr. Roy K. Flannagan, assistant director of the State Health Department at Richmond, will be present to aid the local board and to offer timely advice.

The Fairfax Town Council will hold a special meeting tonight to discuss a bill passed during the last session of the legislature authorizing the council to submit to a referendum vote the question of dividing the town into four wards.

The Fairfax County Health Unit will hold a free chest clinic this morning in the county health office at Fairfax. White persons will be examined in the morning and colored persons in the afternoon. Dr. Scott, of the State Health Department, will conduct the examinations assisted by the County Health Unit and Miss Sara E. Coleman, who has charge of arrangements of the chest and heart clinics in northern Virginia. Dr. R. E. Peagans, superintendent of the local unit and Mrs. Herbert Seamons, county health nurse, will be in charge of the details of the clinic.

Fire, caused by the 3-year-old son of Stanley Minor, living near Annandale, playing with matches, destroyed a large hay stack and set fire to a barn on his place yesterday morning.

The Fairfax Volunteer Fire Department responded to the alarm, which was 6 miles away, and managed to save the barn by dropping a hose in the well and using the water. Loss was estimated to be about $100.

Mrs. Nannie Johnson, worthy matron of Clifton Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, has appointed the following persons to standing committees for the year. The entertainment committee will consist of Mrs. Grace Mathers, Mrs. Ruth Pyles, Mrs. Helen Buckley and Miss Ruth Buckley. The flower committee, Mrs. Marian Grille, Mrs. Hattie Kidwell, Mrs. Pauline Clinton and Mrs. Fannie Hart. The committee to visit the sick, Mrs. Alice Woodyard, Mrs. Daisy Buckley, Mrs. Stina Curtis and Mrs. Lily Buckley. The publicity committee, Mrs. Emma Kidwell, Mrs. Maud Taylor, Mrs. Lula Mantiply and Mrs. Julia Riordan.

The Music Study Club of Falls Church will meet tonight at the home of Mrs. Mary Ryer. E. L. McNall will read a paper on the composer "La Forge" around whom the program will center. Mrs. William McGuffey, W. S. Frick and Mr. Gilbert will sing. Mrs. McGuffey and Mr. Frick will give duets, Mrs. Catherine Lawrence, piano solos, and selections will be rendered by a sextet, composed of W. S. Frick, Robert Ballenger, Clarence Shotwell, Guy Ervin, Mr. Gilbert and George Thompson.

The senior class of the Clifton High School will present their class play entitled "Out of the Stillness" tonight and tomorrow night in the auditorium of the Clifton high school. The music between the acts will be furnished by Mrs. Will Compton and daughter Eloise from Manassas.

Divisional Superintendent of Schools Wilbert T. Woodson stated yesterday that reports had reached him that persons were stating that if the Floris Vocational High School is discontinued the county school board would move the Floris colored school children into the building. Superintendent Woodson emphatically stated that this rumor was utterly without foundation and if such action was proposed he would strenuously oppose it.

The Floris elementary white school and the Floris Vocational High School occupy adjacent school lots.

The regular weekly broadcast sponsored by the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce every Tuesday evening from 5 until 6 o'clock over station WJSV at Mount Vernon Hills will be in charge of Capt. Thurlow White, of Baileys Cross Roads. Capt. White and other speakers on the program will stress the suburban advantages of Fairfax County in the broadcast this afternoon. Musical selections will be rendered during the program by local talent.

Miss Sara E. Thomas, Fairfax County home demonstration agent, will give a demonstration on the preparation of whole wheat muffins before the 4-H Club at Colvin Run this afternoon.

The Colvin Run School and Community League has elected Mrs. Lucy Brown, as president; Mrs. Maud Ballenger, as vice president; Mrs. Will Oliver, treasurer, and Mrs. Joseph A. Wheeler, secretary.

Danville Tobacco Association Meets

Evans Is Chosen President of Group at Annual Session.

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., April 14.—J. D. Evans was elected president of the Danville Tobacco Association at the annual meeting held here this afternoon.

The tobacco trade was informed this afternoon by the retiring president that the bright belt farmers are preparing to plant a larger crop than last year, notwithstanding the warning against such a step by Federal authorities.

He also reported that the export of bright leaf tobacco during 1929 decreased approximately 21,000,000 pounds. Georgia, South Carolina and eastern Carolina, Mr. Carrington said, will show an increased acreage which "will be suicidal to the farmers in those tobacco belts," since the supply will greatly exceed the demand.

LEGAL ACTION SEEN AGAINST UNFIT CARS

Harland Says He Is Ready to Drive Unsafe Autos From Streets.

PREVENTION IS SOUGHT

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Washington traffic officials agree that mechanically unfit motor cars should be removed from service. They are fully aware of the hazard created by automobiles whose brakes, headlights, steering mechanism and other equipment which makes safe driving possible have reached a state of wear and maladjustment that is beyond repair.

Accordingly, the motorist who allows his car to become unsafe in any of these respects may expect legal action to compel him to remove the hazard of a dangerous vehicle from the city's streets.

Pointing to the provision in the traffic regulations which gives him authority to prohibit the operation of any automobile when, in the opinion of himself or any of his designated assistants, it is in an unsafe mechanical condition, Traffic Director William H. Harland declares his office is prepared to enforce the law to its fullest extent.

Suspected Autos to Be Gone Over.

The traffic director believes altogether too many cars are being neglected by their owners. At every opportunity cars suspected of mechanical defects will be subjected to a rigorous inspection. The owner, then, must make the repairs necessary to put the car once more in safe operating condition, or stop driving it.

Mr. Harland is convinced that inspection, to be effective, should be continuous. He questions the value of periodic examination of vehicles and points to the possibility of faults arising during the period between inspections as one weakness of such a system.

"There is no questioning that the mechanically defective automobile is a vital factor that must be reckoned with in achieving traffic safety," said Mr. Harland. "The driver who owns a car with brakes that will not stop it within the prescribed distance, with headlights that are glaring, or with steering gear that has been weakened from service, is threatening the safety of both vehicular and pedestrian traffic.

"From time to time we find cars that are so plainly unsafe that we may assume that they are not single instances of defective equipment. I do not believe, however, that just because a car has been in service for several years it can justly be labeled as unsafe. But in any case, where there is any evidence of mechanical failure of any kind, I would not permit a car in such a faulty condition to continue to be driven on the city streets. It is a menace and can not be viewed in any other light."

The director of traffic declares his office is extremely anxious to make as many inspections as possible to determine mechanical safety of cars so as to discover those that are potential hazards. He cites instances of examinations that have been made and states that there have been occasions when the owner has not even been allowed to drive the vehicle away, but compelled to have it towed to a service station.

Inspector E. W. Brown, head of the Traffic Bureau of the Police Department, is vigorous in his denunciation of unfit automobiles. However he takes the position that as the regulations are now worded the police are restricted to stopping a car only when there is some tangible evidence of a defective unit.

assaulted, and then shot. Bullets found in her body were of .25 caliber. One was found in her arm after it had passed through her neck. Another entered her left side and deflected off the eighth rib. The third bullet, which was not found, entered her back.

Mr. Gloth said he considers leads given by residents of Rosslyn substantial.

As reconstructed by police, Miss Baker's movements have been definitely traced as follows: At 4:30 she left the Navy Department with Miss Inez Eyre, of the Evangeline Hotel, who is a friend. They went to Lenten services at the Epiphany Church, G street near Fourteenth.

She left Miss Eyre to go to her car, which was parked in the Ellipse. At the time she made no mention of an appointment with Wilson, Miss Baker was to meet Mildred Sperry and Olga Skinner, who live with her at 217 Beech street, Lyon Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh R. Wood and J. A. Rice are the persons said by police to have seen Miss Baker beaten by a man with a gray cap. This attack occurred in her automobile parked near Seventeenth and B streets. Addresses of these people, given by police, proved false. It was evident that the police were trying to shield them.

Tag Numbers Check.

They heard shrieks, and immediately the car sped north on Seventeenth street. The witnesses reported the occurrence to police, and the number taken by them tallied with Miss Baker's registration tags. That was the last time she was seen alive.

Here enters a gap in the movements of the machine. It was between 10 and 11 o'clock when a man heard a man and woman quarreling in a machine parked on the lonely Government road. Next watchmen saw a machine speeding down the road toward the cemetery as two shots rang out at short intervals. The car sped toward the culvert and was abandoned a half mile beyond.

A story of Mrs. B. L. Collins, who lives at Alexandria avenue and Albemarle street, that she heard a violent quarrel between a man and woman in a machine in front of her house, is corroborated by other witnesses.

Woman Leaps From Car.

Mrs. Collins said the car drove in front of her house at 10:30 o'clock. The man and woman were arguing. Mrs. Collins said the woman jumped from the machine and ran across the street and hid behind a tree. She was not wearing either a coat or hat. Mrs. Collins said the man shouted to her to get in the car.

The woman refused. Then the man cursed her. As this was occurring, Mrs. Collins said a man approached on foot and told the driver to switch on his lights. To this the driver replied, "Go to hell."

When the woman refused to return to the car the man drove back and forth, trying to induce her to enter. Travin Green, a roomer, was called by Mrs. Collins, and he saw the incident. Other witnesses to corroborate this story are a family by the name of Reeves, who live across the street from Mrs. Collins at 1512 Alexandria avenue. They heard the man offer to take the girl home and she refused.

Auto Seen Parked.

But later she entered the machine. Mrs. C. S. Cunningham, who lives a block north of Mrs. Collins' home, said that her husband saw the machine parked. He was returning from work and he shouted to the driver to turn on his lights.

Four persons say they heard shots in the vicinity of the road where the body was found. Edward Bright, a watchman on the Arlington Memorial Bridge construction work, said he heard three shots in rapid succession coming from a point north of the culvert soon after 2 o'clock Saturday morning. These shots were accompanied by the screams of a woman. Later he heard an automobile racing down toward Military road in a southeasterly direction.

C. H. Thompson and Albin Anderson, who live on Greenlees avenue about 150 feet east of Harlow avenue, said they heard voices in a car parked in front of their house. Then the car started away and two shots were fired. They could not distinguish the words of the conversation. They said it was between 10 and 11 o'clock.

Watchmen Corroborate Story.

Robert Howard, of 1224 Twenty-ninth street, Washington, a watchman at the Penn Oil Co., corroborated this story. Howard was in front of the Penn Oil Co. along the railroad tracks when he heard the shot fired. It came from the direction of Greenlees avenue. The report was followed by another as a racing machine swept by the oil company. He was unable to identify the car. Leo Dorman, a watchman at the Gulf Refining Co., also heard the shots.

D. E. Wilson, an employe of the Patent Office, related a story to the police that may be a sequel to the story told by watchmen and residents along the railroad tracks in Rosslyn, that they had heard shots fired soon after 10 o'clock on Friday night.

Saw Auto Parked.

Wilson was returning to his home in Ashton Heights and was traversing Military road on the south side of the Arlington Cemetery. On a lonely bypath just past Syphax station he saw a car parked. This incident was recalled when he read of the murder.

Early yesterday he told the story to Mr. Gloth, who designated a man to accompany him to the scene. Two rocks were found which bore traces of blood, and two fragments of letters.

Wilson said that that night a man was walking near the car, apparently searching for something. This story ties in with the stories of the shots by the oil company watchman in Rosslyn.

The flag-draped casket containing the remains of Miss Baker were removed yesterday from the undertaking parlors of C. J. Ives at Clarendon. It was taken to the girl's home in Oak Grove, Va., where funeral services will be held today at St. Peter's Episcopal Church, where her father, the Rev. Thomas F. Baker, is pastor. Members of the family accompanied the body.

Condemnation Jury Reports.

A jury impaneled in District Supreme Court to condemn land for the widening of Sandy Spring road and Aspen street and the extension of Willow street yesterday assessed damages of $21,949.97 and costs of $788.20. The damages and costs were distributed by the jury among property owners the jury believed would benefit from the improvement.

Salesman Files Bankruptcy Plea.

Nathaniel Tuttle, who describes himself as a salesman living at 2737 Devonshire place northwest, yesterday petitioned the District Supreme Court to adjudge him a bankrupt. He lists liabilities of $56,825.11 and assets of $1,340. Attorney Joseph A. Kaufman appears for him.

shooting ensued. Logan and Borum were arrested Sunday.

A coroner's jury this morning will be asked to decide which of the three shot York.

Written confessions from the three prisoners that they were at the scene of the shooting were presented at the grilling yesterday, but the homicide squad was unable to shake down the claim of Borum that he did not do the shooting. Borum absolves Logan, with whom, it is alleged, he operated a liquor business, but accuses Guy of firing the fatal shot.

Borum is being held at the Third Precinct, Logan at the Fifth and Guy at the Second Precinct.

Logan has employed Peter P. Richardson, colored attorney, to defend him. Richardson said that Logan told him yesterday that Borum was directly in front of him when the shot was fired.

Man Goes to Grand Jury In Store Robbery Case

William Powell, colored, who is alleged to have assisted Samuel Jones, colored, in an attempted robbery of the Charles Schwartz & Bro. jewelry store, at 708 Seventh street northwest, was arraigned in Police Court yesterday on a housebreaking charge and was ordered held for action of the grand jury under $2,000 bond.

Jones, who is said to have been captured in the store, is alleged to have named Powell as an accomplice. Jones was arraigned and held for the grand jury last week and, testifying against Powell yesterday, declared both were drunk when they entered the store. Powell, it was brought out, has been at Gallinger Hospital since his arrest.

PERFECT LOCATION SELECTED BY SLAYER OF MARY BAKER

ley would extend by 5 miles the jurisdiction of the local park police.

The members of the park police are under Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, the director of the public buildings and parks here. Consequently, they are in the Federal service.

Today the jurisdiction of these policemen ends at the Highway Bridge edge of Potomac Park, although in emergencies they frequently go over this line. Under the plan suggested by Secretary Hurley they could extend their patrol area for at least 5 miles, and this would take in all of the unprotected Federal roads, including the one where Mary Baker's body was dumped off.

Representative R. Walton Moore (Democrat), of Virginia, has incorporated Secretary Hurley's suggestion into a bill which is now before the House military affairs committee.

In a letter to the committee yesterday, Representative Moore declared that the Baker murder stressed the need of his legislation, and urged an early hearing on it.

In a report to Secretary Hurley, Sheriff Howard Fields, of Arlington County, declared that between 25 and 30 felonies are committed on these unprotected Federal roads each year.

The Secretary himself had this to say to Congress:

"The situation has become a public disgrace, especially along the road leading from Highway Bridge to Arlington Cemetery, where numerous cars have frequently parked at night in order to utilize this road (because it is not policed by anybody), as a place for carrying out immoral practices."

35-Cent Cab Firms Indorse Project

Proposal to Fix Financial Responsibility Given Approval.

Representatives of the four 35-cent cab companies in Washington last night unanimously indorsed the proposal to demand financial responsibility of taxicab concerns in a meeting last night at the offices of the Sun Cab Co. The three other companies were the City Cab, Stop-Me Cab and Bell Cab.

William McK. Clayton has been retained by the independent cab organizations to appear for them today at the hearing before the Senate District committee on the proposal to place the Public Utilities Commission in complete control of taxicab operations in the city.

The cheap-rate cab companies believe the bill in its present form would give the commission too much power, according to E. C. Ostrow, secretary-treasurer of the City Cab Co.

Three Damage Actions Based on Auto Mishap

As the result of a collision between an automobile and a motor truck last January 26 at Eighteenth and K streets northwest, three suits for an aggregate of $45,000 were filed yesterday in District Supreme Court. Henry W. Beatty and Lester B. Beatty, both of Bluemont, Va., are named defendants, allegation being that both owned the truck and one was operating it at the time of the accident.

Francis E. Seitz and Francis J. Campbell, both of the Washington Y. M. C. A., and Ralph Breary, 324 Adams street northeast, are the plaintiffs. Seitz asks $10,000 damages; Campbell seeks $15,000 and Breary wants $20,000. Attorneys Burkart & Quinn appear for the plaintiffs in each suit.

MUELLER'S ELBOW MACARONI

WHEN children's appetites rebel, here's a way to get them to eat healthful, nourishing food. Serve Mueller's Elbow Macaroni. Even when no other food appeals, boys and girls eagerly relish this most tasty of all macaronis. Its small size and elbow shape make it most easy to eat.

A Different Macaroni

Mueller's is different from any macaroni you have ever served. It has a taste all its own and, when boiled for nine minutes, it acquires a lightness, fluffiness and easy digestibility that make it an ideal food for children. Avoid the common mistake of overcooking—although one or two minutes more may be allowed if especial tenderness is desired.

There are hundreds of ways in which Mueller's macaroni products can be prepared, all delicious. Send for our book of recipes illustrated in color. No cost or obligation. Just write to C. F. MUELLER CO., Jersey City, N. J.

A Delicious Health Food

Mueller's Elbow Macaroni is most healthful. Made of a selected blend of farina—the heart of the wheat—it supplies energy, health and body-building elements to growing boys and girls—and to adults as well.

Be sure to say "Mueller's" the next time you order from your grocer. He has it or can get it for you.

PRESIDENT GREETS D. A. R. CONVENTION

VAST NEW HALL FILLED

that Mrs. Peabody's hurts while painful were not serious.

Preceding Mrs. Hobart's address, greetings were given by a number of the honorary presidents general present. Although their remarks had been limited to two minutes several of them took more than that amount of time. Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, of Greenwich, Conn., who recently retired from office, made the shortest speech of any of the honorary presidents general, her remarks taking less than a minute, during which time she stressed the necessity for members to follow the policies outlined in the national congresses and to exhibit stanch loyalty to the administration.

Prohibition Support Asked.

Considerable surprise was occasioned at the morning session when, contrary to the usual custom of having the keynote of the congress sounded by the president general, Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, of Cooksburg, Pa., honorary president general, interjected a political note into her remarks and greetings by coming out vigorously in support of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution. In her remarks Mrs. Cook said:

"There are at stake in our national life today certain issues which are so far-reaching that they are matters not alone of politics or of partisanship. One of them is of the utmost importance to the men and women of America, to the mothers and fathers of the men and women of tomorrow. The issue to which I refer is whether or not we shall as individuals stand back of the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment of the Constitution.

"My advocacy of law enforcement and my individual support of the eighteenth amendment are already well known."

Mrs. Cook then attacked by inference the Literary Digest poll on prohibition when she continued:

"I claim no powers as a seer, but if every magazine and newspaper in America today that is trying to swell its circulation by conducting a poll as to whether the country is to be wet or dry were to unanimously announce a wet decision, I shall still have faith enough and confidence in the sober judgment of the American people at their regularly constituted voting polls to prophesy that the eighteenth amendment will not only never be repealed but that in each succeeding year of our democracy it will be more and more successfully upheld."

Political Issues Barred.

Later in the afternoon, in making her report as chairman of the national board of management, Mrs. Hobart, president general, reiterated the position of the D. A. R. in regard to political issues.

"There has been no declaration," asserted Mrs. Hobart, "by the Daughters of the American Revolution concerning any question into which enters party controversy, whether that controversy be within parties or between parties. We must make that definitely clear, that the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution can not be used as indorsing any promissory notes of performance to accord with any policy into which enters partisanship, neither against or for anything of a political creed, one way or the other. With, perhaps, as many shades of opinions upon public questions as will be found in any like number of American citizens, it follows that controversial matters, political in their nature, no matter how strongly appealing, have no place before a Continental Congress."

"The first duty of this organization," continued Mrs. Hobart, "now as ever is to declare its adherence to the Constitution of the United States which you, as loyal daughters, are pledged to uphold. That is the first requirement of your membership. I admonish you, however, that you are bound by the by-laws of this society to take the Constitution in its entirety. Each amendment is important in itself, but none must be singled out during this congress for special attention. I trust that no resolutions embodying any special constitutional amendment be brought up for consideration."

10,000 New Members.

In her report Mrs. Hobart further expressed the desire that women learn the difference between politics and propaganda and between politics and legislation. She pointed out that to indorse protective legislative measures is not entering into politics at all.

Mrs. Hobart suggested a census in citizenship asking Americans to stand up and be counted not only as lovers of country but as defenders of nationalism as well.

During the past ten months more than 10,000 members were admitted to the D. A. R., according to Mrs. Hobart. The president general urged that during the next year an intensive drive be made to bring in the daughters and granddaughters of each D. A. R. member and if too young to join the D. A. R. to enlist them in the ranks of the Children of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Hobart reported that she had visited many State conferences and divisional conferences during her first year of office and had found the society in a healthy state of progress.

That the compiling of family records and archives as an aid to the historical treasure of the country was imperative was noted by Mrs. Hobart.

She declared in conclusion that the dedication of the girls' dormitory at Oxford, Ohio, to the memory of Mrs. Benjamin Harrison was the crowning event of her first year in office.

High points of other reports made by national officers yesterday afternoon included the following:

Mrs. Harriet Vaughn Rigdon, treasurer general, of Wabash, Ind., reported that the receipts of the D. A. R. for the current year amounted to $327,000 with disbursements totaling $244,000, leaving a balance on hand March 31 of more than $185,000.

Patriotic Movements Aided.

During the year $169,630 were contributed to patriotic and educational movements within the society or indorsed by it including $66,108.28 to patriotic education. Twelve real daughters of the American Revolution, whose fathers fought in the Revolution received pensions last year from the society and eleven Spanish War nurses and one organizing member also were the recipients of pensions from the funds of the D. A. R.

In the report of the organizing secretary general, Mrs. William A. Becker, of New Jersey, pointed out that the D. A. R. now has 2,392 chapters representing every State in the Union and insular possessions.

The progress in the preservation of Revolutionary relics was noted by Mrs. Samuel Jackson Kramer, of New York, curator general, in her report. This is especially true of the collection of pictures of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. During the year more than 50,000 persons visited the Museum of the D. A. R. in Memorial Continental Hall.

Over 276,770 manuals for immigrants were distributed last year, according to a report made by Miss Margaret B. Barnett, of Pennsylvania, corresponding secretary general.

A tribute was paid to the memory of Mrs. Rhett Goode, of Mobile, Ala., former chaplain general of the D. A. R., in the yearly report of the present chaplain general, Mrs. William Rock Painter, of Carrollton, Mo.

The historian general of the D. A. R., Mrs. Flora Myers Gillentine, of Nashville, Tenn., reported a tremendous interest in history throughout the country. Thirty States are now competing for the honors offered for the best annotated bibliography relative to the Revolutionary War.

Mount Vernon Visit Today.

Among the other national officers who reported were the librarian general, Mrs. Russell William Magna, of Holyoke, Mass.; the recording secretary general, Mrs. Charles H. Bissell, of Connecticut; and Mrs. Josiah A. Van Orsdel, of the District of Columbia, registrar general.

At today's session of the Continental Congress the principal business enacted will be the reports of the national committees of Constitution Hall while the afternoon will be devoted to State meetings and national committees. A pilgrimage to Mount Vernon to lay wreaths on the tombs of Martha and George Washington led by Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general, while Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, of Alexandria, Va., the last Washington born at Mount Vernon is vice chairman of the committee in charge.

Election rumors and rumbles were rife in the congress yesterday. The principal gossip hinged about the status of the California and New York delegations, both of whom have candidates for the office of vice president general.

In the case of California the candidate is Mrs. Theodore Jesse Hoover, the retiring State regent, who is a sister-in-law of President Hoover. Rumors of disaffection in her delegation were discredited by Mrs. Hoover yesterday, who declared that no one therein had informed her that they would not vote for her.

California Split Cause.

The rift within the lute in California D. A. R. politics is said to center about the appointment of Mrs. Lyman B. Stookey, of Los Angeles, as reporter general by the National Board of Management to take the place of Miss Anne Lang, of Oregon, who resigned during the year. Miss Lang had as opponent at her election Mrs. Jessie Shreve, of California. When Miss Lang resigned a number of California daughters are said to have been of the opinion that Mrs. Shreve should have been appointed.

So at the State conference of the D. A. R. Mrs. Stookey did not receive the unanimous indorsement of her State for the ratification of her appointment as reporter general. Mrs. Hoover is said to have declared that Mrs. Stookey is not a candidate of California at all but of the national board. Therefore, the California delegation is divided somewhat and will probably have an effect on the election of the vice presidents general.

In New York State delegation there is a group opposed to the election of the State's indorsed candidate for vice president general, Mrs. Newton D. Chapman.

A new element entered into the race for the eight vice president generalships today when Mrs. Matthew Brewster, of New Orleans, came to the congress as a candidate indorsed by her State conference. Mrs. Brewster was formerly chaplain general and is very popular with the delegates.

HOOVER TO RECEIVE GIRLS FROM JAPAN

Elaborate Plans Made for Entertaining Envoys of Good Will.

AMBASSADOR IS HOST

Bearing messages of good will and appreciation for America's assistance following the 1923 earthquake and fire at Tokyo, four young Japanese ladies, who arrived yesterday, will call on President Hoover and Acting Secretary of State Joseph P. Cotton this morning, before entering upon a whirl of entertainments arranged for their four-day stay in the Capital.

The young envoys are the Misses Kimi Ashino, Sumika Tokuda, Yoshiko Matsudaira and Keiko Nakamura. They are chaperoned by Mrs. Toshiko Matsudaira, a sister of the former Ambassador to Washington and mother of one of the young women. H. Yokayama, a Japanese newspaperman, is accompanying the party.

The attractive young delegates were entertained at a dinner in the Japanese Embassy last night. Other events on their program today will be a broadcast over the Columbia system at 11:15 o'clock, luncheon at the Japanese Embassy and a reception at the American Red Cross headquarters, at which President John Barton Payne will preside.

The Red Cross hall will be decorated with Japanese and American flags, and 40 members of the District Junior Red Cross will distribute flowers and souvenirs to the envoys. The Marine Orchestra will play.

Later in the afternoon the young ladies will be entertained at the home of Mrs. Larz Anderson. Tomorrow Judge Payne will entertain them at a luncheon in his home, and on Thursday, the last day of their stay here, they will be honor guests at a luncheon planned by the Washington Chamber of Commerce.

The young women were all attired in colorful native costume when they arrived at the Union Station yesterday, and were escorted to the Hotel Mayflower by attaches of the Japanese Embassy. While in Washington they will be chaperoned by Mrs. John K. Caldwell.

Man Kills Self as Try To Advertise Rum Fails

Columbia, S. C., April 14 (A.P.).—They gave S. B. Hiller, Columbia man charged with attempting to advertise "pure-charred corn whisky" in an afternoon paper here, his orders at police headquarters today. He obeyed them to the letter.

"I am going to release you," the judge told him in police court; "on condition that you leave town. We don't want your kind in Columbia."

Hiller, with three pistol wounds in his head, was found in his home a few hours later. He died on the way to a hospital. It was a suicide, officers said. Hiller was arrested after the newspaper refused to accept the advertisement.

$40,000 Rail Check Promised in Tax Row

Tallahassee, Fla., April 14 (A.P.).—The Florida Railroad Assessment Board today effected an agreement of settlement whereby Highlands County will receive a check for $40,000 from the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad for taxes due April 1, and the county will lift warrants of attachment levied upon the railroad's property.

J. N. Lee, Highlands County attorney, who said the railroad promises to have the check ready at once, declared all the attachments upon the railroad properties, including those on rolling stock which temporarily prevented the movement of trains, would be lifted as soon as the check is made available.

Bids for Mayflower Refused Fourth Time

For the fourth time bids for the purchase of the Mayflower, historic yacht used by five Presidents, were thrown out yesterday, the offers being considered insufficient.

The bids received and rejected were: Order of Herman, Easton, Pa., (a sportsmen's organization), $60,000; John W. Hubbard, Pittsburgh, Pa., $35,000; the Boston Iron & Metal Co., of Baltimore, $15,665. Since a minimum value of $100,000 has been placed on the Mayflower, Acting Secretary of the Navy Jahncke ordered the Mayflower temporarily withdrawn from sale.

Writ of Habeas Corpus Is Granted to Carver

Sebring, Fla., April 14 (A.P.).—Circuit Judge W. J. Barker this afternoon granted a writ of habeas corpus to William R. Carver, former Philadelphia real estate operator who is charged in indictments with the murder of his wife, his small son and a negro servant. Bond was fixed at $15,000 pending trial, which was set for May 12. Unable to make bond, Carver was taken back to the county jail.

Carver conferred with his relatives regarding the bond, and when they left the jail no announcement was made as to what he intended to do.

Harlem Theater Crash Kills One, Injures 18

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—A Negro woman was killed and eighteen other persons were injured today when the projection booth of the Renaissance Theater, in Harlem, crashed down upon the rear four rows of seats in the auditorium. Most of the injured were Negroes.

According to Deputy Fire Chief Mustard, fire was prevented by the two operators, who turned off the electric current when they felt the projection booth giving way. The booth, about 12 feet long, was supported by brackets from the ceiling of the theater.

openers were present. From noon until 2:45 o'clock the fans streamed steadily over Georgia and Florida avenues into the multiple gates of the capacious stadium. From a few scattered calls the noise grew in volume until just before game time a steady hum was noticeable in the area and solid outbursts of applause greeted the antics of the players on the field.

Early Arrivals Entertained.

Early comers were entertained by the batting practice of the two teams, by a band in back of the home plate and by the comedy of those two veteran campaigners, Nick Altrock and Al Schacht. With a midsummer sun beating down on them, the fans were a good-natured lot, and each fancy catch or ringing hit drew salvos of cheers and applause.

As the teams began their fielding practice, 7,368 photographers, by actual count, had lined themselves in front of the Washington dugout and the presidential box. Appropriately enough the band played "If I Had a Talking Picture of You."

Promptly at 2:30 Capt. William J. Stannard led the Army Band on the field and their glittering gray and white cadet uniforms shone resplendent in the midafternoon sunshine. They marched around the field while the crowd cheered vigorously. Lining up in front of the President's box, the band and players of both teams awaited Mr. Hoover's arrival.

Flag Raised with Ceremony.

The Chief Executive was a little late, if 2:45 was the hour for him to arrive. Possibly he had difficulty getting through the swarms of policemen stationed in and around the park. Anyway at 2:55 he arrived and the Army Band played "The Star-Spangled Banner," with the crowd standing, both in tribute to the flag and the President. A beautiful march to the flag pole in center field followed, with "Old Barney" Walter Johnson aiding in raising the Stars and Stripes. The return trip was not such a thing of beauty, for Altrock could not keep in step and the lines of ball players became lines of stragglers before the dugout was reached.

Another line-up was arranged with Umpires Vangrafian, McGowan and Connolly in front of the teams. Johnson handed Mr. Hoover a brand new ball and Mr. Hoover, with very little windup, cut loose with a speedy pitch in the general direction of home plate. It was supposed to go to Tom Connolly, but he couldn't have caught it with a fish net. After some scramble a Red Sox player came up with the ball and the day was saved. In all fairness, it must be said that the presidential pitch made up in "smoke" what it lacked in control.

Within a minute or two the field was cleared and the game was on. And what a game! But that story remains for the sport pages. It is the crowd with which we are concerned.

Umpire Gets Razzing

Umpire McGowan came in for the first dish of "raspberries" of the new season when he called Rothrock, first Boston player, safe at first on a slow roller which Bluege didn't get over quite fast enough. It was close and the fans let out a roar of protest. McGowan won the decision.

Most of the big crowd remained right up to the finish, for neither team ever had a commanding lead, and "hope sprang eternal" in the Washington breasts until Oliver gathered in Goslin's line drive for the final out. Then there was a mad dash down the runways to automobiles parked for blocks around and to street cars, bound for home and dinner, and that new sensation of realizing that the Red Sox were out in front.

One feature which seemed to appeal to the crowd immensely was the numbering of the Nats. Huge black figures adorned the broad backs of the sturdy athletes and it wasn't long until "No. 3" was identified as Goslin and "No. 27" as Walter Johnson. The Red Sox, too, looked nifty in their gray and red with a "Pilgrim hat" on the left sleeve of each uniform.

Clark Griffith Prominent.

Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, was prominent in the pregame hustle and bustle. In a dark brown suit and gray hat the Nats' boss piloted friends to their seats, conferred with Johnson and saw to it that the show ran smoothly. However, he apparently had no control over the Red Sox.

There were the usual sidelights. Here a boy dashing up to Goslin and Johnson to have a ball autographed. There a fan throwing back a foul from the stands, amid the hoots and jeers of his neighbors. A cheer from those close to the Washington dugout as Vice President Curtis arrived ahead of Mr. Hoover. Cheers also for Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon.

Senators and Representatives were to be found in all sections of the stands. Army, Navy and Marine uniforms were prominent, while an occasional "ice cream" suit on a civilian added to the general gayety of the scene.

Twenty-five brand-new American flags waved from the front of the grand stand for the opening of the national pastime. Another opening day has gone into the record book, and while the home team lost, hope has not been abandoned. Maybe the Nats will reverse the story in Boston today, and if so, all will be forgiven and the boys will be welcomed home on April 20.

Rioters Quelled; $4,500,000 Asked

Cleveland Reds March on Bank Seeking Relief for Unemployed.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 14 (A.P.).—Mounted police today broke up a demonstration of Communists in Public Square after a policeman had been hit on the head with a pop bottle when he charged the crowd.

A short time previous several hundred persons had marched to headquarters of the Cleveland Community Fund, in the Federal Reserve Building, demanding $4,500,000 cash "for the relief of the unemployed." Guards at the Federal Reserve Building refused the crowd admission and drove them back with baseball bats.

Later, however, they admitted a delegation, which presented demands to the Community Fund.

Returning to the square, some of the crowd started a disturbance and police charged them, knocking down about ten persons. No one was injured in the melee, police said. A few minutes later the crowd dispersed.

Body of Floyd Minister Found Hanging to Tree

Floyd, Va., April 14 (A.P.).—The body of Solomon Hilton, 65, for 30 years a minister in the Brethren churches of Floyd County, was found hanging from a small tree near his home this morning. The body was suspended by a bridle rein and a small quantity of poison was discovered nearby.

Relatives stated he had been in poor health for some time and members of his family had kept a close watch over him.

Parents Forgive Girl's Elopement

Eleanor Sturges' Father Accepts Playwright as Son-in-Law.

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—Parental forgiveness was bestowed tonight upon the socially prominent Eleanor P. Hutton Sturges, who eloped Saturday with Preston Sutrges, Broadway playwright. The bride's father, Edward F. Hutton, stockbroer, speaking for himself and Mrs. Hutton, said:

"Of course, these things are always forgiven. We were taken by surprise by the news of Eleanor's marriage Saturday. We would have liked to have given them a nice church wedding. Her mother would have preferred to have put the wedding off for six months or so, but what's done is done. He seems to be a nice young fellow, so they have our blessing."

The "nice young fellow," who is the author of "Strictly Dishonorable," a current Broadway hit, came back to New York today with his bride. When asked about parental objection to the marriage, he said: "After all, Eleanor and I are the ones most concerned."

JOY AND HOPE AGAIN.

President Hoover has tossed the medicine ball faithfully all winter. His doctor is authority for the statement that he is in the pink of condition. So the fact that the first ball of the 1930 baseball season was muffed can not be recorded as a wild pitch on the part of the President. It must go down as an error. But what does it matter that the first ball was muffed? The significance of the event is not diminished thereby. The American people, with all the pomp and glory that can be bestowed upon such an event, through the person of the President of the United States, officially opened the 1930 baseball season. Today, barring rain, wet grounds or other similar catastrophes, all sixteen of the major league clubs will go into action.

The country has changed overnight. Until yesterday there was the result of a naval conference over which to worry. Now there is the music made by the collision of hickory against horsehide, to drown out unpleasant sounds. A week ago the position of the market, statistics as to the crime wave, and other matters brought wrinkles to masculine brows. Now there is the great American safety valve—baseball—to which one may turn for solace and release from perplexities.

Washington lost the opener, not ignominiously, but by the short margin of only one run. That was disappointing, but in spite of disappointment fandom rejoices that the season is opened. Games are won and lost by the whim of fortune, but the season's outcome is another matter. Washington cherishes fresh and expansive hopes—it will not limit those hopes, or publish them just now. Wait and see!

COPYRIGHT LEGISLATION.

Representative Vestal's bill to amend the copyright law is meeting with both praise and condemnation. The House committee on patents, which is conducting hearings on the measure, is learning that added protection to the author means greater risks for the publisher, the dramatic producer, the periodicals, the motion picture industry and other interests. Apparently the task of the committee is to strike a happy medium.

The Vestal bill provides for automatic copyrights. When a work is completed the author would not need to register it to preserve all rights connected with its use. He would be permitted to sell separately the magazine serial rights, stage rights, radio and other rights. This copyright would be good for the life of the author, and for a period of 50 years after his death royalties might accrue to his estate. The bill would also permit the United States to enter the International Copyright Union and thus extend protection of American writers to other countries.

The right of the author to enjoy the returns from his own creations has long been recognized. The question to be decided in connection with this bill is how far that protection should go. Dramatic producers are complaining against the bill on the ground that it will destroy the spoken drama. They cite huge royalties that some recent plays have brought their authors, and complain that when there are losses they are sustained by the producers. Their argument is supplemented by a wail from publishers, and to some extent, from libraries and the public which has to pay the royalties.

Justice demands that an artist's rights be protected. Society must treat its literary geniuses fairly, even generously, to stimulate work of this kind. The public is wont to see the large profits of the few and forget the struggles of the many. Taking the literary field as a whole, its rewards are very scant. So long as this situation continues literary production will be confined to those of independent means or to that rare few who are willing to starve for their art.

On the other hand, literary works should be made available to the public without excessive royalties, which reduce the market for a book or make the production of a play financially unprofitable.

WOMEN AS CITIZENS.

There was some doubt for a few days as to whether the American women who worked so hard at The Hague to eliminate discrimination against their sex in the laws of nationality would accept the outcome as a defeat or a compliment. Apparently they have decided upon the latter course.

The spectacle of the United States delegation holding out against representatives of 40 other nations has stimulated the imagination of American woman. They had not realized that their sex in the rest of the world was so backward. The freedom of women is an American conception which the rest of the world has not yet accepted. Women in this country may take pride in this fact, while deploring the denial of equality to women in other countries.

Unable to swing international opinion to their way of thinking, the American feminists have now turned their attention to educating the world as to the proper status of women. The first movement toward that end is a campaign launched by the National Woman's Party for equal nationality rights under the laws of the United States. At present an American woman loses her citizenship if she marries a foreigner and lives abroad, while a man under similar circumstances retains his nationality. An American woman who marries a man who is ineligible for citizenship in this country loses her citizenship without a chance to regain it. Women who married foreigners before the Cable act was adopted in 1922 can regain their citizenship only through naturalization.

It is the hope of the women campaigners to remove all these discriminations against their sex from the statute books. They hope to see women become full-fledged citizens under the law, whether married or not. When that is done they will be in a stronger position to turn again their convincing logic against an international assembly.

CONTROL OF FIREARMS.

The two murders under investigation by the Police Department should focus attention upon the necessity of restricting the sale and the carrying of revolvers. At a recent meeting of a section of the American Bar Association Nelson Ruttenburg, fourth deputy police commissioner of New York, testified that in 351 homicides in that city during 1929 a gun was used in 182. A total of 338 felonious assault cases out of 2,490 involved the use of pistols or other firearms, and out of 1,172 assault and robbery cases 975 were committed by gun carriers. The two local murders of last week were committed with firearms. Seldom, indeed, does a day pass that does not witness gun play somewhere in the District. But the various movements for restricting the sale and the carrying of firearms have always been and continue to be vigorously opposed.

At a meeting of the House interestate commerce committee last week two proposals looking toward control of the traffic in firearms were considered. Representative McLeod, author of the bills, complained that it did no good to deny a Detroit gangster the right to purchase a gun in his home town, because he had merely to write to a Chicago mail order house to obtain one by express within 48 hours. Firearms laws in 46 of the 48 States, he added, could not counteract the loophole that exists in the Federal law. Representatives of firearms manufacturers, however, testified that the bills, while aimed at the crook, would hit the honest citizen. Make it too difficult for the honest householder to obtain a weapon with which to protect his home, they said, and the forces of organized crime will be encouraged.

Before the Bar Association meeting Karl T. Frederick, representing the United States Revolver Association, testified that 70 per cent of all crime in the United States is organized. The criminal has an 85 per cent chance of escaping punishment. Mr. Frederick insisted that the criminal users of revolvers and pistols constituted only 2 per cent of those possessing firearms, and that severe restrictions would unfairly penalize the 98 per cent of law-abiding citizens who own firearms.

The problem of restricting the sale and the carrying of firearms is thus seen to be very difficult. But through a system of registration it should be possible to improve the present situation.

MORE FEDERAL JUDGES.

For years Congress has been urged to relieve court congestion in various sections of the country by authorizing the appointment of more Federal judges. There was no concerted effort to relieve congestion, however, until the Law Enforcement Commission made its report. Now that court congestion has become a live issue Congress may act.

The bills prepared by Representative Bachmann, of West Virginia, to provide for appointment of one additional circuit judge and seventeen district judges are more than a substitute for the Enforcement Commission's proposal that minor prohibition cases be tried before United States commissioners without juries. They would relieve congestion from all causes wherever it is most acute, and equalize the burdens upon courts in different parts of the country. Congress can adopt this measure without fear that it would be declared unconstitutional, and with assurance that it will accomplish its purpose.

The foremost argument raised against relieving congestion by the appointment of more judges has been that the work of the courts may decrease as prohibition cases become fewer. Since judges are appointed for life, it is feared that some courts would be left without sufficient work. In a country that is rapidly growing and a society that is annually becoming more complex there is no danger that the court facilities will exceed actual needs.

Representative Bachmann's survey of Federal court dockets showed that the Enforcement Commission's plan for nonjury trials would be applicable to but a small percentage of the prohibition cases. Other criminal proceedings and civil cases would not have been affected. Many courts would have remained congested. The survey showed that congestion was localized and that there was no need for a remedy to apply to all judicial districts. After studying the situation thoroughly as a member of the House judiciary committee, Mr. Bachmann came to the conclusion that "the appointment of additional judges is the only practical solution that has been suggested to bring about immediate relief."

The committee has been unable to agree on the Enforcement Commission's proposals. There is little chance that they would be acceptable to Congress and the Supreme Court. The committee can save much time and needless exertion by finding a convenient pigeonhole for the nonjury scheme and reporting the Bachmann bills to the House.

CORN SUGAR.

Corn sugar promises to play an increasingly important part in the country's agricultural and industrial life not, as the average man believes, because of the fact that it lends itself more readily than other sugars to the distilling process, but because it can be produced cheaply, because it compares favorably in sweetening value with cane, artichoke and beet sugars and because it is an eminently wholesome and satisfactory food product. Corn sugar is being produced in considerable quantities today and it finds its way into the preparation of confections, ice cream and similar frozen products, baked goods and meat food products. It is not used in the preparation of cold-packed fruits, canned fruits and vegetables, preserves, beverages, relishes, &c., because a label declaration of the presence of this sugar is required under the food and drugs act, but a movement is afoot to alter this requirement. If it succeeds, there will be opened up a vast market for the sugar that is refined from ordinary Indian, or yellow field, corn.

In 1923, the problem of commercial crystallization of the latent sugar in corn was solved. The process has been developed until it is now possible to remove from a bushel of corn weighing approximately 56 pounds, 25 pounds of refined corn sugar, 1½ pounds of oil and a considerable residuum that is worked up into stock feed. At present about 130,000,000 pounds of refined corn sugar are produced annually in the United States, and last year the corn products industry drew upon the farmers for more than 86,000,000 bushels of corn. This demand has played an important part in stabilizing and maintaining the price level for corn. As the demand increases, as it seems bound to do, the farmer will benefit from the improved channels of outlet as well as better prices.

Corn sugar may be one of the important solutions of the farm problem. If its use can be extended, millions of acres now planted in wheat or other crops that are produced on a surplus basis will be converted to the growing of corn. Corn sugar also may provide an answer to the question: Is the United States to remain forever dependent upon an outside source of supply for sugar? Less than 20 per cent of the total sugar consumption is produced at home; less than 25 per cent is imported from the island possessions and considerably more than 50 per cent is imported from foreign countries. The sugar imported annually into the United States is equal to the product of 500,000,000 bushels of corn, or approximately one-fifth of the entire crop.

If, perchance, America's sugar supplies should be threatened, the country could turn to corn for a substitute supply. In all probability, as the process of manufacturing corn sugar is improved and the public becomes educated to the wholesomeness of this relatively new sweetening agent, there will be a decided swing toward its utilization whether an emergency arises or not.

THE SMELLIES

(From the London Times.)

Now set the teeth and stretch the nostrils "wide," for the "smellies" are on the way. In all scientific matters precision is important, and it is as well to fix in the mind the words in which the newly granted patent in America announces to the world its latest treat. What has now been invented is nothing less than "an apparatus for supplying an olfactory impression in conjunction with a motion picture impression." The inventor, John Leavell, of Los Angeles, takes a broad view of what olfactory impressions may be; and the nose as an organ of enjoyment, or at any rate of sensation, is about to come into its own.

Well may the American press hail the new device with the cry "Perfumed Pictures permeate program," for any one who pauses to enumerate to himself how many things there are in the world that smell strongly, and who reflects that whatever exists can be filmed, will realize that life is to be lived more intensely than before. Every branch of a great industry will profit. It is not only that cookery can now be taught from the screen with savors that will be meals in themselves, and that will reveal to housewives perfections of whose existence they did not know.

The favorite drama of high life in large and splendid halls will take on a new lease of life when Lucullan banquets can be smelt, even if the day is still distant when a further invention makes the illusion of the film really complete by providing real food for the audience. "Talkie" directors who consider all plots worthless which do not include scenes of entertainments with large choruses will insist on cabaret scenarios, and the talkie crime stories will be strengthened in their claim to provide 100 per cent of stark horror when a sickly odor of blood pervades the auditorium. Another popular class of film, that dealing with wild animals, has not found talking apparatus of any great advantage. But, with a careful selection of wild animals and a little skill in putting the audience downwind, unforgettable experiences should be created.

Each new invention creates a new profession, and parents who hitherto have paid little heed to their children's power of smell will do well to consider whether the profession of the sniffer is not bound to grow. The film is being used more and more for education, both historical and geographical, and, while the ordinary producer will be able to manage the burning cakes in the Alfred scene and the seasick horses in the tale of the Norman Conquest, he will want help in a good many passages of history. Only the expert can prescribe the olfactory accompaniments to prehistoric monsters, or to the furs and woad of early fashions.

Still more skilled will be the blender's art who uses smells symbolically. Beyond the first obvious exercises in cheese symphonies to accompany Mickey Mouse lies a vast field for the harmonization of eyes, ears and nose. We may expect the "close-ups" and "fade-outs" of happy lovers to be accompanied by the scent of the more obvious flowers, particularly roses. It will be a mark of talent in the director of olfaction, whose name will be added to the already considerable list of memorable persons with which a film begins, to introduce, quite artlessly, his onion smell just before the most emotional passages. Many a lovers' parting will be staged in a kitchen garden. But if the smellies develop on the lines of the talkies and the silent films, and megalomania breaks out among the big noses of the profession, a reckless race will begin to see who can produce, regardless of cost, the most vivid, arresting, startling, overpowering, and tremendous stench.

JUST FOLKS

HUNGER.

I lightly ate at breakfast time and luncheon I forgot,
By some strange chance I did not think of food I needed not.
But by 4 o'clock of the afternoon to myself I murmured low:
"Now what on earth is wrong with me,
and what is this pain I know?

"I have no strength for this task undone, I've a hollow feeling here.
Why do my fingers blunder so, and why is my sight not clear?
And what is this gnawing pain inside,
and why do I feel so weak?
Is it some disease which is stealing now the color from my cheek?"

Then I thought of the luncheon I had missed, and I laughed away my fears
For I recognized those hunger pains which I had not known for years.
And I said it were well if more men forgot at times their noon-day meals
So that hunger's pain they would recognize and know what a poor man feels.

If He Doesn't Care Where He Sits, Wherever He Sits Is the Head of the Table.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

THIS afternoon, while I was in the yard puttering with rose vines, a stranger entered and introduced himself. His first words made clear his belief that he had done me a favor by calling. He felt important. That in itself was pardonable, for every man has a right to respect himself, but his manner and remarks indicated that he considered me very unimportant, and that was discourteous.

Some hours later I was down town and had my hat and coat on ready to leave the office, when another stranger appeared. He removed his hat as he introduced himself and kept it in his hand until he left. His manners were courtly, and everything that he said and did seemed to proclaim an humble opinion of himself and a high regard for me.

The first man was an illiterate cotton-mill evangelist, and the second one of the richest and most influential men in the State.

Good manners, as you know, consist almost wholly in making the other fellow feel that he is more important and entitled to more respect than you are.

And in twenty years devoted to the study of men I have found it an almost invariable rule that the small fry, who have achieved a trivial success and never can climb any higher, are without understanding of good manners, while the men who do big things are uniformly courteous.

And that, alone, explains much success.

There is a common belief that men who have big jobs think great thoughts of which lesser men are incapable, but if you will follow one of them through the day, you will find that he never does anything or solves any problem beyond the capacity of a smart boy in the seventh grade.

That is literally true. Big jobs are like big numbers—just little ones with added ciphers that look impressive but are easy to handle.

In fact, the bigger the job the easier it is, for the more it delegates power to capable lieutenants.

The "big" men seldom have any quality or ability unshared by lesser ones except the matter-of-fact self-confidence and the unaffected humility that result in perfect poise and deferential courtesy.

Without conceit or arrogance, without fear or servility, they are manly men of good manners, and that equipment carries them far.

The manners of a gentleman are the manners of success and there is little true success without them.

THE ONCE OVER

MAHATMA GANDHI MAKES SOME SALT.

Mahatma Gandhi has completed his march to the sea and made salt. It is hard for the average American to see why this should get more than a couple of lines in the sports, housekeeping, daily recipe or social columns, but the incident got as much space on page 1 as the naval parley and a little more than the latest hatchet murder.

* * * *

Mahatma walked 200 miles for his salt when he could have found it at the village grocer's or even in his own pantry. Any neighbor would have loaned him salt, and probably pepper. But that wasn't the point. By going to the sea, scooping up a pail of water and making only enough salt to flavor a bowl of noodle soup, he was, in a manner of speaking, not only twisting the tail of the British lion but salting it in the bargain.

* * * *

Jonathan X. Bull has the exclusive rights on the salt manufacturing business in India and when Gandhi and his followers made salt they were registering civil disobedience.

* * * *

England looks upon Gandhi's making of salt the way President Hoover would look at it if Aimee McPherson raided his trout stream or the way Andrew Mellon would regard it if Billy Sunday marched to Pittsburgh in his pajamas and made aluminum.

* * * *

You know how shocking it would seem, for instance, if Dr. Cadman marched into the steel yards of the U. S. Steel Corporation at Gary and began making railroad plates.

* * * *

Mahatma Gandhi made no great impression as a salt manufacturer and it was the unanimous opinion of spectators that it would be very painful to have a spray of celery and have to wait for the salt until Gandhi produced it. The indicent drew attention to him, however, as one of the most sincere leaders in the world and the only great public figure operating practically naked.

* * * *

Mahatma considers a guest towel a complete traveling suit with patch-pockets and belt. His general appearance, touring, salt-making or lecturing is that of an undernourished curio dealer looking for a bathtub.

* * * *

But when he operates, the world knows it is no vaudeville act. He is so sincere that the world would pay him serious attention even if he bothered to dress. What he wants is independence for the Indians. That's what America wants for Americans. But civil disobedience won't do it.

* * * *

We've had civil disobedience in this country for twelve years and all it got us was the Wickersham committee and the Literary Digest poll.

* * * *

Still, Gandhi's performance gives us an idea. How about having some outstanding American "yet"—Mr. Raskob or Dr. Butler—get into a nightgown, march to the Potomac River and make dandelion wine?

WHO COULD TELL?

Mme. Tussaud's Museum is showing a waxworks of the London naval limitations huddle. The American delegates got into it by mistake and sat there five hours last week before they sensed vaguely that something was wrong.

Among those Americans not suffering from unemployment are the officials who prepare those weekly statements showing a big drop in unemployment.

Well, an airman has made the first coast-to-coast trip towed by another aviator. Week by week aviating is coming to seem more and more like flivvering. About all that remains to be done now to popularize the airplane with the masses is to prove that six people can get out and picnic in midair.

The United States Navy has accepted a 9-mile gun, which will fire 800 times a minute. It may be necessary to use it to get our delegates out of the naval conference.

WILL THIS BE A BLOW TO YODELING?

Switzerland, by a referendum vote, has made liquor prohibitive and put the country on a light wines and beer basis.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

No Monument to Jefferson in the Federal City, Which He Helped to Plan and Adorn.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is a civic anomaly by which I am very much puzzled that Thomas Jefferson, whose birthday is yearly celebrated here by the glowing verbal tributes of admiring devotees, has no substantial memorial among the costly monuments which adorn the Capital. His standing as the ablest leader among the pre-Revolution patriots who made the American Revolution possible, alone entitles him to this distinction.

But aside from that, a brief survey of his connection with its early planning and growth will vindicate that among the major monuments of the Federal City should be one in his memory.

To begin with, it may be worthwhile to recall that, when the locating of the National Capital was still in doubt, it was by means of a log-rolling pact, engineered by Jefferson and Hamilton, that the site on the Potomac was finally selected.

Before the actual Capital planning began, it was Jefferson who recommended Maj. Andrew Ellicott for the preliminary plotting and, subsequently, Maj. Pierre Charles L'Enfant, who had "the spirit of an artist, the skill of an engineer, the soul of a gambler, and who was one of the most capable, egotistical, and gifted men of his time."

Indicating the deep concern with which Jefferson envisaged the future development of the Capital of the Republic, while in France he visited and made notes of the plans of the cities of Frankfort-on-Mayne, Amsterdam, Strasburg, Orleans, Bordeaux, Lyons, Montpelier, Marseilles, Turin, and Milan. These he sent to L'Enfant, "in a roll by the post," at the latter's request.

Jefferson, bear in mind, was the first President inaugurated at Washington, and as a tenant of the White House set an example of good citizenship by taking a helpful part in local affairs. He was the first president of the Board of Education; took part in the periodical public muster of the militia as far, he stated, as other "duties of paramount obligation will permit," and turned out with other good citizens to fight the flames in case of fire.

Indicating the picture of the City Beautiful, which at this early date Jefferson had in mind, he planted four rows of Lombardy poplars on Pennsylvania avenue, a start which was not followed up until the appointment of a parking commission under Boss Shepherd 70 years later.

In relation to the origin of the plan which bears L'Enfant's name, the idea that it was wholly the product of a single individual is hardly correct.

Speaking of the work involved, Louise Payson Latimer, in "Your Washington and Mine," remarks:

"In these difficult tasks Jefferson gave much help. It would be an interesting study for a historian to trace the influence of Jefferson on the embryo city. In Washington's efforts he was right-hand man, and the two apparently were in sympathy in all things relating to this pet child. Besides being peculiarly gifted along artistic lines, Jefferson was, fortunately for the country, in a key position as Secretary of State to further its interests."

Bearing on this point, Thomas Nelson Page ("Washington and Its Romance") says:

"But I think that a statement of all the facts connected with the establishment of the City of Washington will lead to the conclusion that it is to Washington and Jefferson that the greatness and magnificence of the plan was due; to the commissioners and Ellicott, its soundness and accuracy, which is but another name for common sense; and to L'Enfant, its magnificence."

In this connection, Thomas Nelson Page ("Washington and Its Romance"), after asserting that it is far from true that to L'Enfant alone "is due the magnificence of the plan of the Capital of the United States," says:

"Much of this grand conception is due to Washington, and much—especially in those matters of grand detail which make Washington City unique among the cities of the country—is due to the universal genius of Thomas Jefferson. This, it has been well said, we may cede, without robbing Pierre Charles L'Enfant of the credit due him for his fine professional achievement in constructing the plan."

But leaving out of consideration the intimate relationship of Jefferson's activities with the early growth of the Federal City, a visitor from abroad might well wonder why it contains no monument in honor of the author of the Declaration of Independence. What Lafayette would think if he should return to life and visit us again, may readily be imagined.

Why the great political party which professes to point with pride to Jefferson as its founder fails to have erected an adequate monument in his honor is the greatest puzzle of all. Does the decadent spirit which is indicated by its neglect in this connection account, perhaps, for its failure to elect Presidents and dictate policies as it did in the good old Jeffersonian days?

POSTOFFICE LEASE INQUIRY IS ASSURED

Blaine Resolution Calling for Quiz Is Referred to Audit Committee.

$10,000 FUND REQUESTED

(Associated Press.)

Investigation by the Senate of Government postoffice building leases—of which there are more than 1,200—was virtually assured yesterday.

Administration leaders permitted a resolution by Senator Blaine (Republican), Wisconsin, to be referred to the committee on audit and control, for approval of expenditures, without the routine procedure of going first to the postoffice committee. The resolution calls for a broad inquiry into charges of corruption and fraud in connection with the leases.

Chairman Deneen, of the audit committee, said later he would call a meeting for consideration of the measure "immediately" after it was received—probably today—and that he would call for an early report to the Senate.

Favorable Report Seen.

The committee chairman said he could not forecast the committee's action but it was generally expected that the report would be favorable. The resolution, introduced at the beginning of lengthy debate last week, calls for an appropriation of $10,000 for the investigation.

Willingness for the inquiry was expressed yesterday by three administration spokesmen, Senator Jones, of Washington; Fess, of Ohio, and Phipps, of Colorado. Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, joined Blaine in an attack on the postoffice's lease for the commercial station at St. Paul, Minn., and the Senate voted to withhold funds for payment of the rent hereafter.

The Postmaster General has welcomed investigation, recalling that no rent had been paid on the St. Paul Postoffice building since March, 1928, and that efforts are being made to break the lease.

Charges of Fraud Made.

Wholesale charges of fraud and corruption were leveled at the Postoffice Department by Mr. Blaine while the Senate was considering appropriations for the department. Mr. Blaine asserted that the department had been "criminally negligent" and that the Justice Department had withheld records of reports connected with transaction of the St. Paul and other leases.

The Blaine resolution calls for investigation by a special committee of five who would go into conditions surrounding the St. Paul and other leases.

Attacks on the St. Paul lease centered on charges that the rental of $120,000 a year was excessive; that the building had been condemned by municipal health authorities, and that the owners had sold bonds on an inflated valuation, inferring Government security for them.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

AND it came to pass that on the third day King Phipps, a man hardy of nature and stubborn of mind, still sat on King Blaine's resolution to investigate the so-called postoffice scandal. And he was not to be moved. Entreaty and cajolery availeth not.

And on the fourth day, there came emissaries to him from the court of King Blaine, who was by now aroused in his wrath. And these emissaries spake thus to King Phipps:

"Oh, Most Illustrious Potentate, our master grows impatient day by day. Let us implore you to heed the irresistible forces that move against you. Trust not your indomitable will, oh, Most High, trust not the evil words that are uttered by your friends."

* * * *

AND King Phipps then spake in turn:

"Beguile me not with thy veiled threats, thy unsound logic, thy ill conceived words against mine friends. Thy efforts to cause me to distrust mine counsel is as of the ill-sown wind. Thy seeds of dissension shall fall upon a barren field.

"It is written upon the sands that this resolution is mine, to be taken to mine postoffice committee and there subjected to the test of the microscopic glass.

"But do not misunderstand me, good servants. Go back and tell thy master that the moustache which you see is not to deceive him, that no artful thoughts enter my mind. I bid thee tell him that the resolution shall be reported out in the quickest of time."

AND so it came about that King Blaine was in a most angry mood. He vowed vengeance upon the whole of King Phipps' tribe. A political pestilence should sweep his land, his crops should go without drink, the throats of those about him should become as parched as the dried corn stalk.

Thus it was that on the fifth day he directed his emissaries to wait again upon King Phipps, to beseech him to hearken to the clouds in the sky, to give heed to the shadowy omens.

And when they waited upon King Phipps this time, they were more direct and to the point.

* * * *

"OH, All Highest and Most Esteemed," they said, bowing low and sweeping the floor with their turbans, oh, All That is Good and Noble, we come before you again in a profound desire for peace. Why in the dickens don't you get off of that resolution and let King Blaine have it?"

And the chubby king's whole being rocked with laughter at the blunt sincerity of them, but he remained firm and bade them go away and let him alone.

So it was that on the sixth day a rumbling was heard all over the land known as the Senate. The storm clouds gathered menacingly. There was a jangling of chains and a gnashing of teeth. King Phipps was blown off the resolution and it went to the audits and accounts committee, where King Blaine wanted it to go in the first place.

The amazing thing is why, in the light of Senate history on investigating resolutions, Senator Phipps did not let it go there the first day.

SPECULATION IS RIFE OVER MELLON STAND

Pennsylvania G. O. P. Chief Hints Skids for Davis, Belief of Some.

CAPITAL PUT IN FLURRY

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Announcement by W. L. Mellon Republican State chairman of Pennsylvania, that he would support Francis Shunk Brown for governor and Senator Grundy for the senatorship in the forthcoming primary loosed a floodgate of speculation here yesterday as to whether the skids were not being set for Secretary of Labor Davis.

Politics in Pennsylvania is a heart-breaking thing, far more so than in other States.

The fact that the Mellons intend to take an active part in the campaign was enough in itself to cause a flurry here.

There is no doubt in any quarter as to where President Hoover's sympathies lie. No one thought that he would do anything to help Mr. Davis or that he would permit the latter to make such use of his Cabinet place as to involve the President in the fight, but that Mr. Hoover should favor Mr. Davis is a generally accepted fact. To make this statement is simply to say that he is human.

Previous Belief Reversed.

In view of this there was considerable belief that the Mellons would remain inactive. This, they are not only not going to do but their ticket bears every evidence of being an appeal to the Vare faction of Philadelphia to forget about Mr. Davis.

It is such a deal as this that the Mellons wanted from the first. They did not want a fight. They wanted a compromise by which Mr. Vare should pick the governor and the Grundy-Mellon faction the senator.

Senator Grundy was adamant to any pleas for harmony. He insisted that Samuel S. Lewis be permitted to run on the ticket for governor with him.

In the heat of the battle that is now getting under way, the senator says he simply would not traffic with the Philadelphia crowd, that they were too downright low for him. The political cynics say that Senator Grundy was convinced that he could crush Mr. Vare once and for all and that it was because he saw such an opportunity and not because of high political principles that he refused to compromise.

His motive, however, is neither here nor there. He stood his ground. At the famous Pittsburgh celebration of Secretary Mellon's birthday the situation was thrashed out and the word is that not only the Mellons, but other party leaders told Senator Grundy that they would not accept his boy friend.

It was then that Mr. Lewis withdrew and Senator Grundy got himself in a mood to withdraw also. But some of his friends rallied to him and insisted that he make the race. Since that time he and Gifford Pinchot have been issuing statements about the same time and in such a manner as to give the impression that they formed a sort of vague twosome, carrying the cause of righteousness. Mr. Pinchott is running for governor.

Matters Put in Different Light.

Things were shaping up so, however, that Mr. Davis seemed to be sitting on the top of the world.

W. L. Mellon's statement puts matters in an entirely different light, at least it throws several degrees of uncertainty over them.

It means now that the State machine with a few exceptions is behind Senator Grundy and Mr. Brown. The Philadelphia crowd is assured of the governorship with the election of Mr. Brown. It is the State patronage, the State spoils that after all count with the politicians, that mean the most to them. The senatorship is an honor and a power that a leader such as Mr. Vare himself might aspire to, but as for the boys who do the work—it is pretty hard to get them wrought up about the senatorship.

In short, victory seems to be already in the hands of the Philadelphia crowd. They will get their governor, just what they wanted, the compromise they sought. Whether they will continue to be enthused over Mr. Davis' senatorial candidacy is something that the future will tell.

The incongruities of the whole thing—and there are plenty—are emphasised not only by the Mellons' activity in the campaign, but by the manner in which W. L. Mellon cast the die. His pronouncement gave Senator Grundy full credit for breaking up the Democratic-Progressive coalition on the tariff. It pointed to this with pride, cited it as one of the reasons why Senator Grundy should be returned to the Senate.

Now the Republicans are trying desperately to get away from Grundyism, they are scoffing at the charge that Senator Grundy had anything to do with the breakdown of the coalition. The coalition broke down because of its untenable position, the Republicans contend. The result was a most natural operation of the political and economic forces involved, they say.

Mr. Mellon says that it was Senator Grundy's excellent work, which means, of course, that it was Senator Grundy who arranged those trades, the scheming that the coalition either sincerely or insincerely attributes to him.

comes that under certain adjustments he intended making at the bottom of the income tax scale they would be in a better position as regards the tax than they were last year.

The increase in the super tax ranged from threepence to one shilling and sixpence, which Mr. Snowden expected to bring in the sum of £12,500,000. Death duties on estates exceeding £2,000,000 in value, he put up from 40 to 50 per cent.

The British's beer barrel got a good thumping, Mr. Snowden envisaging an increased tax of 3 shillings per standard barrel. The poor man, however, will again benefit here, or at least get off lightly, for British brewers have informed the chancellor that the brewing industry itself will bear the burden of the increase.

In the course of his speech, which kept his frail, lame body erect before the House for an hour and a half, Mr. Snowden pointed out that his position was unenviable, and he repeatedly emphasized the fact. He said he was faced with a deficit of £14,000,000 (about $70,000,000) left over from last year's budget, which was the work of Winston Churchill, Conservative chancellor of the exchequer.

Mr. Churchill had anticipated a surplus of £4,000,000 (about $20,000,000). Comparisons were widely drawn tonight between Mr. Snowden's budget today and his first one, under the Labor government of 1924. This time he had only a deficit left over from his predecessor, but then he had a surplus that enabled him to make reductions in various duties on food stuffs, and to leave the income tax and the supertax unchanged.

In addition to abolishing "the inglorious betting tax" of the Churchill era, he noted a reduction in expenditure on Britain's fighting services of more than $35,000,000, compared with three years ago.

He said, however, that this was not so large as he would like to see.

He felt it was deplorable that twelve years after the war Great Britain and the other powers should be sinking so large a part of their resources in huge armaments, "when more than 50 nations have solemnly renounced war as an instrument of national policy and have pledged themselves never to resort to war for settlement of international disputes."

for public disorders in which the blood of Haitians would be spilled by United States marines or to recognize the right to impose upon the American Government this tragic eventuality."

"The executive power," it said "can only solemnly affirm the absolute and intangible right of the council of state to elect freely a president in conformity with the constitution and without the intervention of any foreign power."

However, the proclamation ends by urging the council of state to "adhere in full liberty to the pressing appeal of the executive power."

The opposition leaders regretted the mention of the United States marines spilling the "blood of Haitians."

Orderly groups gathered in public squares and around the newspaper offices during the day, discussing the situation created by the dismissal of the council. There was no disorder.

GANDHI ARREST SEEN AS PROBABLE MOVE

Step Authorities Evaded Is Expected as Result of Developments.

SITUATION HELD SERIOUS

Bombay, April 14 (A.P.).—With the arrest of two prominent Indian Nationalist leaders in connection with the civil disobedience campaign of Mahatma Gandhi, the situation is believed to be growing more serious and the next event expected is the arrest of Gandhi himself, although authorities thus far have been evading this step.

Jawaharlal Nehru, president of All-India Congress, today was sentenced to six months' simple imprisonment for violation of the salt law, while J. M. Sengupta, Mayor of Calcutta and president of the Bengal civil disobedience committee, was sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment on charges of sedition, conspiracy and obstructing the police.

Large crowds surrounded the court at Naini, where Nehru was tried, sympathizers waving flags.

Day of Mourning Voted.

Members of the Bombay Congress committee immediately decided to observe a day of mourning, and the Nationalist "war council" decided to send out 500 volunteers as salesmen of contraband salt.

One of the leaders of the band was Mme. Kamaladevi Chattopadhyaya, sister-in-law of Mme. Sarojini Naidu, another prominent worker in the campaign. She has been taking a leading part in the passive resistance movement at Bombay the last few days and once she auctioned salt at the cotton market.

Five other arrests were made here today for violation of the salt law.

After the conviction of Sengupta at Calcutta, the police commissioner prohibited all public meetings and processions without licenses. Three meetings of Nationalists were dispersed.

Liquor Shops Picketed.

As a preliminary to picketing liquor shops at Bhimrad tomorrow, thirty women volunteers marched through the village today chanting a war cry against alcoholic drinks. Marchers approached one liquor shop and implored men and women patrons to drink the blood of the volunteers rather than liquor. One woman in the shop threw away her drink, but the men placidly drained their glasses.

The antiliquor campaign began last Thursday, Mme. Gandhi and Mme. Abbas Tyabji picketing dispensaries at Jalalpur and Olpad.

The leader of the battle against the government salt tax, Gandhi himself, will go to Umber tomorrow for a mass civil disobedience meeting.

TWO WIDE HUNTS ON FOR MISSING FLIERS

information leading to the discovery of the ship or body from the ground." An additional reward of the same amount was posted simultaneously by Norman K. Winston, who financed young White in his ambition to become a flier.

Ambrose said that 25 planes from his field and a like number from other airports in the New York area, which took off as soon as the fog lifted this forenoon, thoroughly covered Long Island, southern New York and the Connecticut and New Jersey shores. They will go out again tomorrow morning to investigate new reports and clews, but Mr. Ambrose indicated he thought about all had been done that can be accomplished in an aerial search.

Among the promising leads that were run down were reports that an airplane had crashed near Peekskill, N. Y., and Sand Point, Long Island, respectively. These had a basis in fact, Ambrose's aerial scouts locating the wreckage of what appeared to be a Canadian Fairchild cabin monoplane in the Peekskill area while a cabin monoplane was pulled from the Sands Point surf where it had been landed Sunday afternoon by Joe Rosenbaum with three passengers after futile efforts to get through the fog to one of the Long Island fields.

But there was no trace of the orange and black, two-place, open-cockpit Commandaire biplane with the license No. NC1988-E flown by White when he left Curtiss Field. Planes roared to this spot and that whence telephones calls to Ambrose told of a plane flying about above the fog soon after White was last seen at 4:15 p. m. Observers scrutinized the terrain from the air, now cleared of the last vestage of fog, but they discovered nothing to help them.

Mrs. Betty White, wife of the missing pilot, prostrated with grief and worry at her home here, was in constant touch with the field so that she might know if there was any news of her husband.

Chicago, April 14 (A.P.).—Mobilization of 5,000 Michigan Boy Scouts was ordered today to search for Ralph Fisher Skelton, Chicago artist and aviator, who has been missing since Thursday on a flight from Ann Arbor, Mich., to this city. Search for Skelton by air was abandoned today and an appeal was directed to Walter W. Head, scout executive and Chicago financier, who requested the mobilization.

W. H. Kiplinger, Boy Scout regional director, said troops from Jackson, Kalamazoo, Benton Harbor, Michigan City and Battle Creek would participate in the search of the dunes country and lake shore. Skelton flew to Detroit to witness an airplane exhibit and was flying back Thursday here via Ann Arbor. He was not seen after winging away from the Michigan airport.

Planes piloted by friends flew over the lake and the semiwild stretches of dunes country in northern Indiana, but found no trace of the missing flier or plane.

A bill to authorize the Commissioners to close streets and alleys around the site of the proposed Charles W. Eliot Junior High School. This bill now goes to the Senate.

A bill to authorize the Commissioners to fill vacancies on the Board of Public Welfare.

Two bills were blocked in the time accorded the District—the bill to facilitate the business of educational, charitable and religious organizations and the bill to permit amateur boxing in Washington.

Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, objected to the amateur boxing bill on the ground that the penalties for professional boxing were so light that, instead of preventing such boxing, they would encourage it. He also objected to the admission prices for amateur boxing that were allowed by the bill.

The District bills were steered through the House by Representative McLeod (Republican), Michigan, acting chairman of the House District committee.

G. W. U. Debaters Meet Boston U. Men Tonight

The George Washington University men's debate team will hold its final debate of the season tonight at 8 o'clock in Stockton Hall, the law school building of the university, meeting a visiting team from Boston University. The George Washington debaters, Robert Parsons, Andrew Howard and Hearst R. Duncan, will argue in favor of the adoption of a policy of complete disarmament by the nations of the world. Members of the Boston University team are William Davis, Donald Potter and Louis Nevins.

Tomorrow night men and women students who have represented the George Washington University in intercollegiate debate during the season will be entertained at an official banquet in their honor at the University Club.

Husband Files Action Against Alleged Rival

Valuing the los sof his wife's affection and society at $1,000 a year, Keith Gains, of Columbia street northwest, near O street, filed suit yesterday in District Supreme Court seeking to recover $10,000 damages from George D. Farrell, of Myrtle avenue northeast, near First street, who is charged with having persuaded the woman to leave her husband on March 20, 1920.

Gains tells the court through Attorney Ernest C. Dickson that he married his wife in August, 1917, and that they lived happily together until Farrell came into the picture. Since his wife left him, Gains alleges that Farrell's actions have injured him and damaged him financially, socially, mentally and physically.

Informed of restlessness in the Senate, President Hoover is standing by the nomination and has sent word back to the Senate that objections against Parker will be answered.

This, among other reasons, is given for the delay granted by the judiciary committee yesterday in acting on the nomination. Despite the apparent opposition, Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, and friends of Parker from the Southland are confident he will be confirmed.

Honor Is Paid To Jefferson By Thousands

Capital Folk Also Visit Ash Lawn, Home of James Monroe.

DEEP in the heart of Virginia where wooded slopes guard the romantic old town of Charlottesville, a thousand pilgrims paid tribute Sunday to the memory of Thomas Jefferson, third President of the United States. It was the 187th birthday anniversary of the author of the Declaration of Independence whose services to his country were extolled by Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, who represented President Hoover, and by Senator Clarence C. Dill, of Washington, speaking at the exercises at Monticello, the lovely old home of Jefferson.

President Hoover sent a wreath of magnolia leaves which was placed on the statue of Jefferson by Senator Fess. Flowers dropped from an airplane added a modern note to the ceremony, rich in American tradition.

Going down from Washington was a goodly number of pilgrims from official and social groups who were guests on Saturday evening at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Jay W. Johns, of Pittsburgh, and at a buffet breakfast which Mr. and Mrs. Johns gave at Ash Lawn, old home of President Monroe, which is but a short distance from Monticello. Hard by, or at least, within motor distance, is James Madison's home, thus making of the region a triangle bordering historic vales.

It was on February 1, 1830, that Ash Lawn was conveyed by deed to E. A. Goodwyn, and on February 1, 1930, Mr. Johns came into possession of the fine old house, which he will present to the Nation as a shrine. In conjunction with the exercises commemorating Jefferson's birthday Mr. and Mrs. Johns opened Ash Lawn, where they are now living, presiding at a breakfast on Sunday noon following the program at Monticello. As honor guests were the three generations of Monroe descendants, Mrs. Rose Gouveneur Hoes, Miss Maude Gouveneur, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Hoes, Mrs. Green C. Goodloe and Green Clay Goodloe, all of Washington, and several descendants from Frederick and Baltimore. Also from Washington Mr. and Mrs. Johns invited Senator and Mrs. Dill, Senator Fess, Representative and Mrs. Stephen W. Gambrill, Representative and Mrs. Andrew J. Montague, Representative Jed Johnson and Col. and Mrs. Clark.

At the dinner in Charlottesville on Saturday evening the guests from Washington included Senator Fess, Senator Thomas L. Walsh, Representative and Mrs. Bloom, Mrs. Emmett Gudger, and Miss Vera Bloom.

During the afternoon hundreds of visitors wandered through the well kept grounds of Ash Lawn from which James Monroe mounted his horse to ride to Washington, where he took the oath of office of the President of the United States. Mr. and Mrs. Johns have restored the fine old place, adhering to the original landscaping, which features the great oval-shaped garden threaded with hedges of shining green boxwood. Shadowing the mansion is the towering Norwegian pine, planted more than a century ago by President Monroe, who transported the tree from Norway and cared for it during the later years of his life.

Today it stands as a sentinel of historic lore, guarding the mansion which, through the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. Johns, will become a Nation's shrine.

...as many Frigidaires are now in use as any other make of electric refrigerator

THIS IS WHY

All Porcelain-on-steel

Every household Frigidaire is finished inside and out with Porcelain-on-steel. It won't rust, scratch, peel, or blister. It is beautiful and stays beautiful always.

Surplus Power

Every Frigidaire has the surplus power to keep food safely cold even on hottest days.

The Famous "Cold Control"

With Frigidaire's surplus power, the "Cold Control" makes possible extra-fast freezing of ice cubes or desserts.

Unit at the Bottom

The mechanical unit is in the bottom of the cabinet out of the way. This arrangement provides a flat, usable top and adds to the beauty of the cabinet.

The New Hydrator

Wilted vegetables are revived and fresh vegetables stay fresh in the Frigidaire Hydrator. It ends the need for using covered pans or dishes for this purpose.

Elevated Food Shelves

Because the mechanical unit is at the bottom all shelves are conveniently elevated. No stooping is necessary.

Quiet Operation—Always

Recent improvements and refinements make permanently quiet operation one of the outstanding advantages of Frigidaire.

Low First Cost—Low Operating Cost

The economies effected by quantity production make Frigidaire prices low. Operating cost is little because the motor runs only a small part of the time.

THIS IS WHY

FRIGIDAIRE is sold with a definite guarantee, backed by General Motors.

And still more important to you as a purchaser is the fact that year after year Frigidaire continues to give satisfaction—long after the guarantee has expired. If service should be required it is rendered instantly and without removing the machine from the premises.

Wright, 30, ousted two years ago as sheriff of Juneau County, tonight was held in the county jail over which he formerly presided, in connection with the assassination of District Attorney Clinton G. Price, fatally wounded in the kitchen of his home last night by slugs from a shotgun, which tore through a screen door and into his body.

A trial of stains, described as blood by Sheriff Elmer Hempelman, from the driveway of the Price home to the bank of the Lemonweir River and in an abandoned boat found opposite the Price residence and leading almost to the back door of Wright's home, caused authorities to seize the former sheriff shortly before Price died at 12:25 a. m.

Wright attempted to resist officers, who were compelled to use force in taking him to the county jail, where an examiantion revealed an artery of the middle finger of his right hand severed. He refused to tell what caused the injury.

Shotgun Is Found.

A shotgun believed by the authorities to have been the one used in the shooting, was found in the river today not far from the abandoned boat.

A coroner's jury was impaneled this afternoon and after viewing the body, adjourned until tomorrow.

Wright, formerly known as the "boy sheriff," was sentenced last Friday to eight months in jail on his plea of guilty to a Federal prohibition conspiracy charge. He was the principal Government witness against Price at the latter's recent trial on a similar charge. Price was acquitted.

Bootleg feuds and political differences have developed a bitter factional feeling, which found its way into support or condemnation of Price and Wright in this county.

Revenge Theory Advanced.

One theory was that Price as a militant prosecutor was slain in revenge for a series of raids or to prevent the fulfillment of his recent threat to "blow the lid off in Juneau County."

Another was that Price was the "double-crosser" which he was pictured during his recent trial on the liquor-law conspiracy charges and was killed in retribution.

Price, it was learned, had been preparing his promised statement on conditions in the county. Ever since he raided a giant still near Kilbourn, Wis., friends said he had been receiving threatening letters. He laughed at them.

At the age of 26 Wright was elected sheriff, the youngest the State has ever had. In 1928 he made an unsuccessful run for representative and late that fall was removed as sheriff by former Gov. Fred R. Zimmerman.

The Battle of London

While on an Army furlough for fourteen days to the British Isles I was driven over to the large American Y. M. C. A. hut, which was located off the Strand in the heart of London, England. This hut occupied about five acres of land and could accommodate between 5,000 and 6,000 soldiers, sailors and marines, and served good meals for the price of one shilling. The hut was almost always crowded with British, Australian, Canadian and American troops and a crowd of soldiers were usually congregated in front of the hut, which was a short distance from Westminster Abbey and the House of Parliament. On this occasion about 800 American sailors had arrived in London from Southampton and other British ports on 36-hour furloughs and a great number of them were congregated around the hut. There were also present in and around the hut about 500 American troops. As I descended from the Red Cross bus in front of the hut I observed two Canadians, one Australian and an American sailor playing dice. An argument arose and a general free for all encounter ensued. At this juncture a British bobbie came upon the scene and attempted to stop the fight, and in doing so struck the American sailor on the head and almost knocked him unconscious. This British officer made a grave mistake in interfering with these men in uniform, who were playing dice, as there was a military order in both the American and British armies to the effect that only military policemen could interfere in such cases and either separate the participants or in proper cases arrest the offenders.

The word soon spread around the great hut amongst the Americans that a British policeman had struck an American sailor and had severely injured him. Immediately the 800 American sailors and all the casual American Army soldiers who were around or in the hut on leave assembled in a body and threatened to clean up the entire British police force. Army and Navy officers and Y. M. C. A. authorities tried to quiet the Americans, but almost failed. Word soon went around that some of these men were going to stone some of the public buildings in London and a riot almost ensued. At this juncture a wire was received from Admiral Sims ordering al the sailors back immediately to their ships. The Americans were finally dissuaded from carrying out their threats and the crowd was gradually dispersed, but not a sailor returned, as ordered, to his ship, to my knowledge. They all took their 36-hour furloughs and plead ignorance of having heard of any such order.

The following day I was walking with a buddie of mine around Hyde Park in London and desired to get to a subway to visit the Tower of London. We approached a British Bobbie to ask him how to get to the subway and as we did so he demanded whether we were "Yanks," and upon receiving an affirmative answer immediately stepped backward in fear of being struck. We assured the British policeman that we were his friends and that we had never contemplated taking such action, and upon learning that we were in earnest he gave us the information we had inquired about in a more carefree manner. For the remainder of the time I stayed in London on my furlough the British police were rather afraid of the Americans on leave in London, but the American service men conducted themselves very properly and the British police soon forgot about the above incident and went about their beats peacefully.

Why They Emigrate

The office door opened with a bang and a childish voice called out, "Is this the Y. M. C. A.?"

"Yes, son," replied Mr. Henry, who had gone to the office early to catch up on his work, "What do you want?"

'Gum," came the terse response, as a small black head appeared above the counter.

Surprised at such a request, Mr. Henry got up from his desk and walked over to the counter in order to see what his diminutive visitor looked like. Standing on tiptoes was a small, chubby, rosy-cheeked boy of 10 with snappy black eyes looking eagerly up at him. As though he had not heard aright, Mr. Henry asked, "Gum, did you say?"

"Yep."

"But why do you come here for gum?"

"'Cause in America you can always get gum at the Y. M. C. A."

Mr. Henry laughed and said, "Got any money?"

"Nope."

Amused at the frank replies of the friendly youngster Mr. Henry continued to question him.

"What do you know about America?"

"Me! Oh, I know lots about America," boastfully replied the small boy. "I went to school through the fourth grade. Then my pa took a notion he wanted to come back to Poland, so we packed up and here we are." Then he added, confidentially, "But I don't like it."

"So that is where you learned to speak English, is it?"

"Yep. And I'll tell you another thing. See these trousers?" he asked holding open his coat and exhibiting the article of clothing in question. "When ma told me we were going to Poland I just told her I wasn't going to wear stovepipe trousers like the boys over there did. She kicked, but finally made me two pairs of knickers out of pa's pants. The other kids like to guy me, but what do I care? I know that deep down in their hearts they're only jealous. When they get too fresh I pull out this American flag from my pocket and make 'em salute it," and holding a soiled American flag out in front of him, he clicked his heels together and with military erectness and precision gave the salute. Then he turned to Mr. Henry and added: "If anybody refuses they get a good licking afterwards."

Mr. Henry chuckled. Here was a boy after his own heart, but time was flying and his work remained undone. Reaching into his pocket, he drew forth a package of gum and handing it to the youngster, whose eyes fairly bulged at the sight of the desired luxury, he said, "Here you are, sonny. Now run along, but remember, although you may like America better than you do Poland, you should use the knowledge you gained there to help those children less fortunate than yourself."

"All right, mister," he replied, with a grin stretching from ear to ear, and backing through the door with the package of gum clutched tightly in his hand, he called out, as he turned to go downstairs, "But I'm going back just the same when I get big enough."

Kingman Ordered To Capital Duty

Officer Who Is Mentioned as Ladue Successor to Come Here.

The Army officer who has been mentioned as the possible successor to Col. William B. Ladue as Engineer Commissioner of the District, Lieut. Col. John J. Kingman, now assigned at Milwaukee, Wis., has been ordered to Washington to assume new duties in the office of the chief of engineers, according to an announcement at the War Department.

While it is not known that he was brought here at the request of President Hoover, it is thought that because of the desire of the President to appoint an entire new Board of Commissioners Col. Kingman might be appointed to take Col. Ladue's place within a short time. The present Engineer Commissioner's term will expire in January, although he might give up his place before that date.

It was pointed out at the War Department that a successor to Col. Ladue was not being placed in the office because of Col. Ladue's work, but because it was desired that one Army man should not hold the place for more than a limited amount of time. Col. Kingman is known to have requested a transfer to Washington, and in his new tour of duty he will be chief of the river and harbor division of the office of the chief of engineers.

Former Capital Woman Denied Divorce in India

Mrs. Florence Campbell Forrester, former resident of Washington, has been refused permission by the courts in Calcutta, India, from appealing a decision by the Appellate Court there which set aside her requested decree for dissolution of her marriage to John Campbell Forrester. She had charged misconduct.

Mrs. Forrester is the former wife of the late George F. Becker, who at one time was a prominent geologist in the Geological Survey of the Department of Interior.

Shopping with Bab

DEAREST GENEVIEVE: Have you ever seen anything the way every one is frantically buying clothes for Easter? It is certainly a good barometer of business conditions, and should be the one thing to stop all the hue and cry about inactivity, which is so largely a lot of conversation.

I met a certain local society woman coming out of a shop on Connecticut avenue and she blithely annnounced to me that she had just bought six hundred dollars' worth of frocks and hats, and was so happy with her selections. There are dozens of women and girls in Washington whose clothes allowance is practically unlimited. They are buying whatever they want, just as they always have. Clothes are so perfectly divine this year that there is simply no resisting them.

Smart Photographs in Spring Clothes

—are the next thing to take into consideration. Underwood & Underwood are busy making photographs of women in their Easter attire, while it is fresh and new. While innumerable studio portraits are being made, a great many women like to be photographed out-of-doors, in the blooming gardens, and under the young leaves of the spreading trees.

With such backgrounds and surroundings, Easter frocks and hats will have an added charm. Underwood & Underwood undoubtedly have a genius for making artistic photographs, the composition, lighting, finish, mounting, everything contributing to the beautiful result.

The pictures, which are only $20 the dozen, are as exquisitely finished as the rarest pictures in the studio. You will often order a dozen of these when you have also ordered some larger, more expensive portraits, as there are many uses for pictures of this type.

Glance in Underwood & Underwood's window as you pass today. You will like the distinctive style of the photographs selected for this display.

Vegetable Shampoos at Maurice

—are the ambition of every woman who wants glossy, beautiful hair. Maurice, 1504 Connecticut avenue, has a reputation for doing excellent beauty work of all kinds. While Mr. Maurice himself is in the greatest demand for permanent waves, hair tinting, cutting and waving, he has succeeded in surrounding himself with a staff of experts so efficient that you are sure of the best work, whether you can secure Mr. Maurice in person or not.

It is best to make your appointments ahead of time, although, of course, this is not always absolutely necessary. If you want a permanent wave you must make your appointment ahead for that.

Fashion Says Purses Must Be Thin

—and the thinnest, softest, smartest purses in town are to be found in Elizabeth Arden's, 1147 Connecticut avenue. These purses have just recently arrived from Paris in time to add that necessary touch to your Easter costume.

Elizabeth Arden shows extraordinarily unique necklaces, with sets of bracelets and so on, which are the last word in fashion.

You have learned before now that you may step in the little shop off the street, the entrance shop, and choose preparations, lingerie, negligees, or anything you want without ascending to the fifth floor where the treatment rooms are.

Every Lovely Frock at Schwartz

—in every lovely spring color, and every sweet 1930 fashion, are shown in the pre-Easter displays. Schwartz, 1325 Connecticut avenue, has become known as a place where it is possible to buy appealing styles in costumes for every occasion at prices beginning at $16.50.

Yesterday I saw such darling flowered nets with puffed sleeves and flounces, as quaint and pretty as anything you have ever beheld. Printed silks, plain colors, many with their own coats or capes, and various other materials are found in the more than generous assortments at Schwartz, 1325 Connecticut avenue.

Men Buy at The Williard Shop

—when they want the correct details to finish their Easter attire. The proper scarf to wear with a morning coat, the right gloves and hat, and even a French handkerchief of sheerest linen to show crisply from the left-hand pocket, may be selected from the extensive displays shown.

The Willard Shop, 1033 Connecticut avenue, has been for many years the favorite shop of diplomats and statesmen, as well as the gay young man about town.

An Old Ship With Two Masts

—in a fascinating model with the original rigging may be seen at the Old Virginia Shop, 1711 Eye street. This is a square rigged model with the same sails and everything just as it has been through many years. If you are interested in ship models you will take special delight in this one.

The Old Virginia Shop is rich in authentic antiques, and since I told you about it the last time, has acquired numbers of pieces not seen there before. There is a wonderful swell-front corner cupboard and there are some genuine Chippendale chairs, as well as countless other things which only an appreciative collector can passibly assemble.

Pasternak Hats Emphasize the Mode

—whatever it happens to be at the moment. Just now the displays for Easter include all the most fascinating blocks from famous Parisian designers. You may depend upon it, that any hat shown at Pasternak's is the last word in smartness, no matter for what occasion it is designed.

Pasternak's, 1219 Connecticut avenue, is famous for it's tailleurs, but has equal distinction in the exhibits of adorable afternoon and evening gowns. To possess a costume from Pasternak's is the ambition of many a woman visiting Washington this week. You might be surprised at the moderate prices possible in this exclusive shop.

Glaser Millinery For Small Prices

—and for hats that you take pride in wearing, goes without saying. Glaser was formerly at 1502 Connecticut avenue, but has been for several months at 1532 Connecticut avenue, in the same block, but nearer Q street.

This is the place to have your hats altered and reblocked, as you probably know.

Brushing Up on Contract

—is the serious diversion of many women during the spring months. The Wardman Park Bridge Studio under the management of Mrs. Paul D. Bunker has classes going all day every day. You may have private instruction if you want it, or you may make up a table of your own friends and meet with Mrs. Bunker for an hour on stated days.

Your friends who have been winning all your money lately have, no doubt, been doing this very thing of spending a little time at the Wardman Park Bridge Studio sharpening their technique. Call Columbia 2000 for an appointment.

Fountain Service at the Hobnob

—is especially popular now that warm days have come again. It is pleasant to know of an attractive place where you can drop in in the midst of shopping to have a tall, cold drink or an ice in quiet and seclusion.

The Hobnob, 1010 F street, is just across the street from Woodward & Lothrop's, easy to find, and worth while when you have found it. The tearoom, where you go for fountain service, luncheon, tea or dinner, is on the second floor, and is so unique and attractive, all done in modern art, fantastic lighting, too unusual!

Just in Time for Easter

—Camalier and Buckley open their new luggage shop tomorrow at 1114 Connecticut avenue. This is one of the most noteworthy events which has taken place on the avenue in many a day. It further emphasizes the importance of this shopping center.

Mr. Camalier was for 30 years with Becker Leather Goods, and was that store's general manager for many years. During that time the store gained a national and international reputation for fine leathers.

The interior of the new shop, done in Circassian walnut with a French beading in gold, provides a dignified setting for the exhibits featured. Complete riding equipment will include the finest saddlery and boots, with an expert to fit the boots properly. This is good news to riders, who have found it difficult to be smartly fitted in riding boots. The detailed appointments for a hunt team in a riding show may be secured here also. Camalier and Buckley will carry luggage made by Wheary, the man who introduced the chushion top and open top wardrobe trunks, and you know what that means. Drop in tomorrow and inspect this beautiful new leather goods store.

The Lamp Shade Shop Invites D. A. R.'s.

—to visit it and view the charming collection of English and French antiques to be found there. The Lamp Shade Shop, No. 2 Dupont Circle, has always the most divine selection of lamp shades. Mrs. Helen Tanquary Smith is famous for heer original and beautiful shades. Hand-painted screens, some with old flower or bird prints are simply too perfect! In fact when you visit this shop you will agree that nothing said about it could possibly come up to the charms it has to offer.

Ask to see the Family Biographical Register, a handsomely bound volume arranged for biographies, lineage tables, ancestor charts and for the keeping of complete family records. The price is $16.50 each.

D. A. R. Delegates Now in Town

—always plan to have luncheon or dinner or both at the Iron Gate Inn, 1734 N street. Because there is a roomy loft for special parties, it is a favorite selection. Luncheon is served from 12 to 2:30 at from 50 cents to $1.25. Dinner is from 5 to 7:30 at $1 and $1.25. Every night this week there will be roast capon on the dinner at $1. This is a four-course meal and includes good things you like.

The Iron Gate is a picturesque restaurant entered through a paved court, just like Paris. It was once the stable of Gen. Nelson A. Miles.

Parisian Step-ins At Mrs. Dulany's —are only $12.50 each. These are fashioned with a fitted hip yoke and I dare say you have not found such a splendid model anywhere since fashions changed. The present silhouette demands a very special fit in underthings, and when you see this step-in you will order in by the dozen.

Easter gifts in handmade pin-cushions, traveling cases and odd knick-knacks are moderately priced in this exclusive shop. Brides are ordering trousseau and lingerie and negligees at Mrs. Dulany's, 1901 Q street. This is on Connecticut avenue just off Q.

Affectionately,

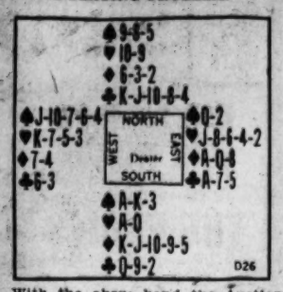
WORK ON BRIDGE

A PLAYING PROBLEM.



With the above hand the Auction Bridge bidding would be: South one No Trump followed by three passes. East might be tempted to bid, but with a high card in every suit to furnish support for any lead West might make, East was in good position to defend against a No Trump and was better off by passing than by bidding a suit headed by only Jack-Eight. The hand lacked the strength needed to justify an informatory double.

In Contract Bridge South would bid two No Trumps which North would jump to three.

The original lead would be the Six of Spades, on which East would play the Queen. Before reading what follows, make up your mind how you would play this hand if you were the Declarer.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

South, being able to win two Spades and fearing that East (if allowed to hold the trick) might lead a Heart through South's menace, would win the first trick and then attempt to make up dummy's Clubs. The Declarer, short of sure tricks, would see that the establishing of a long suit was necessary. Making four Clubs would aid materially in producing game, but at least one, possibly two Diamonds, would be needed in addition. With no dummy entry outside of the Club suit, dummy's long Clubs would not be run unless the adverse hand which held the Ace had it as a singleton or one of a doubleton. If the adverse Ace had two guards it would be held up until the third round and two Clubs would be the maximum that Declarer could make.

Consequently Declarer should lead a Club from closed hand to the second trick and cover in dummy. It would not matter whether the first lead was the Queen covered with the King, the Nine covered with the Jack or Ten, or the Deuce covered with the Eight; but when dummy won trick 2, a Diamond should be led to trick 3 so that the finesse could be taken. With East playing the Eight of Diamonds, South would false-card by playing the Jack and win the trick. Then South should lead a second Club, again overtaking in dummy; and if the Ace were held up a second time, a second Diamond should be led. With the cards as they happened to lie, this would be effective in establishing four Diamond tricks for South which, with two Clubs, two spades and one Heart, would make game.

GOOD NEWS, BRIDGERS.

We are pleased to announce we can now renew the offer of Milton C. Work's great Contract and Auction booklet entitled "THE PLAYING PROBLEMS." Bridgers who received copies from previous offers are most enthusiastic over it.

"PLAYING PROBLEMS" presents eighteen hands, the complete auction and contract bidding for each hand with reasons for each bid, the answers to every question and the reason for each answer in complete detail.

"PLAYING PROBLEMS," which will be of much greater value to the auction and contract player than many high-priced textbooks, is not for sale. It has been prepared exclusively for readers of this newspaper by special arrangement with Mr. Work. One copy will be mailed to you upon request if you send self-addressed stamped return envelope, together with 6 cents in stamps to defray part of the cost of printing and handling this 48-page booklet. Requests not complying with these conditions will be ignored.

Aunt Interprets the MODE

PARIS, April 14.

SLEEVES are expressing themselves! They have refused to remain just dress appendages, as it were, and are "branching out" for themselves. The long, straight, tight sleeve is giving place to a fancier model with a line that is elegant in its own right.

Suits often have cape-sleeves which are short or elbow length, flaring at that point and then tight fitting to the wrist. Chiffon frocks sometimes show a sleeve shirred or smocked above the elbow for tightness, and from the elbow down a flare of long hanging drape. Summer dresses of the sports variety, if they have a sleeve at all, have just a short sleeve that may tie in a knot above the elbow.

The most unusual and dainty new sleeve is that worn with a dinner dress to convert it into a formal afternoon frock. This sleeve is detachable, made of lace matching that on the frock, and held in place with thin elastic. As the dinner hour approaches, the sleeves are taken off and carried as nonchalantly as the handkerchiefs of elegance these days, the chiffon and richly laced ones, or as long gloves.

Dressy street coats sometimes outdo their rival coats in sleeve cuffs, wearing two, one above the other and loosely so that the cuff drapes a little or rather looks like two unstitched incrustations.

There are certain kinds of ruffles that just seem as though they ought to stand up—so I wasn't unduly surprised to see in the salon of Phillippe et Gaston a delightful dinner dress with the quaintest ruffled collar of horsehair braid, no less! I just had to sketch it for you, and here it is, with its ruffle 'n all of the meline.

* * * *

You would think the less the shoe, the more they cost, if you had shopped around in despair for the right kind of a heel and the right kind of heel for your summer wardrobe. But who cares about price when they find just the shoe! "Huh, it isn't you who have to keep your checkbook balance," sniff, La Chic Secretaire. Oh, well, it'll take them five weeks to make those five pairs I ordered, so maybe the well-known B. B., meaning bank balance if any, will get righted by then.

I have sketched the pair in silver and the pair in black satin. I ask you plaintively, could you blame me?

* * * *

In these days of midnight suppers and friends settling themselves comfortably in your kitchen for a snack, and of dinky little apartments where the kitchen vies with the living room for "livableness," is it any wonder that we're all so interested in brightening it up? So if you want to know a thing or two about this kitchen decorating business, send your stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet.

* * * *

And we also advise you to look each Sunday for the weekly Dare fashion letter in The Sunday Post.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

(Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce.)

In the use of portable heaters care should be taken that they are not placed too near to combustible material and that they do not set fire to the floor or rugs on which they stand. For portable gas appliances only the best quality of flexible tubing should be used, since defective or cheap tubing introduces danger of leakage of gas or disconnection of the tubing during use. In any case, the gas should be shut off at the pipe rather than the appliance, so that the gas will not escape if the tubing is broken or disconnected when the appliance is not in use. Permanent piping should be used wherever possible. When using flexible metal tubing, the users should protect it from excessive heat, since the rubber or other material used to make the tubing gastight is easily damaged by excessive temperature.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

ONE year ago I had an amaryllis which bloomed most beautifully. When the plant was through flowering I planted it in the open. When the top had been killed by frost I lifted and potted the bulb, then placed it in the cellar to rest. Now I find that it is beginning to show signs of growth. Would you advise bringing it out of the cellar and beginning to water it regularly? Is the amaryllis hardy and can it be left in open all winter? DAVID E.

The amaryllis is not a hardy bulb and must be brought indoors in winter. It is better to keep the bulb growing in a pot all the time than to plant it in the open in the summer. The amaryllis should be placed in a pot 1 inch larger in diameter than the bulb. Plant the bulb so that only the thick part is covered with soil; the long neck must be fully exposed. It will grow in any good garden soil, but use preferably two parts of good garden loam to one part of well-decomposed cow manure and sufficient sharp sand to make it loose and friable.

In the summer the plants will be benefited by plunging the pots in the border where they will be exposed to full sunshine. In the autumn store them dry in the pots in which they have been growing in a cellar or other place in which potatoes would keep in good condition. When you notice the bulb showing signs of life bring it at once to the light and begin to water regularly. A cupful of liquid cow manure will help to increase the beauty and size of the flower at this time.

Please tell me when to start a tulip bulb that was very lovely last year at Easter. I have been keeping the bulb in newspaper. Surely it must be time to start it. Also please tell me about another plant, which I understand is an African begonia. All the large leaves have fallen off this plant and now the new ones which are coming out are all very small. Can this be the result of too much plant food? Some time ago you mentioned a course in horticulture which did not require a college education. Will you tell me something about it, I am very much interested in this subject. LORETO F.

A tulip bulb that bloomed in a pot last year should have been planted in the open, in some sunny place, in October. It is too late to start a bulb in to bloom this year. You might plant the bulb when the weather permits, though I doubt if it will ever bloom after being out of the ground for so long a time. When a begonia begins to lose its leaves it is always due to too much or too little water and too little fresh air. The amount of plant food you mention is about four times as much as the plant should have. If you care to write again, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be glad to give you name of the school of horticulture which does not require college credits, also the name of a firm of florists who have a school where you can take a course in the retail florist business.

Please tell me how to get rid of ants in my garden. Last year the entire lawn was overrun with these pests. MRS. WILLIAM F.

If you care to write again, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be glad to mail you the name of a proprietary preparation that will aid you in getting rid of ants.

Am inclosing the leaves from two of my house plants. I water them once in two weeks. They are dying. What is the cause of this? MRS. T. G.

Your plants are dying of thirst. The large-leafed aspidistra should be watered three times a week and the palm should be watered every other day.

How to Keep Well

ACIDS AND ALKALINES.

S. R. asks for an article discussing acid and alkaline foods, from their several standpoints.

The popular mind now runs to one phase of this question. It is: Which foods, after being burned, result in acid ash and which in alkali? The process of utilization, commonly called burning, results in chemicals which are used in making energy; the gaseous products are thrown off without being neutralized.

The same holds true of certain of the solids—for instance, urea. After all this has been taken into account, there remain the minerals, which are commonly dubbed "ash." Those which are acid are combined with alkalis of the body to make salts. This lowers the body reserve of alkali. The alkali bodies in the ash add to that reserve. The foods which burn to form alkali are practically all vegetables and fruits. Those which form acids are all the meats, including eggs, and all the grain products, such as breads and cereals. The milks are nearly on the neutral line, though most authorities place them slightly on the alkaline side. The sugars are neutral. So are the pure fats from this standpoint, though they come in for considerable from another angle.

And now to consider some of these other angles. The fruit juices and some of those of vegetables are acid in reaction. These sour organic acids are burned into carbonic acid, thrown off by the lungs as gas, and alkali base added to the reserve. While this is true of most of them in any animal body, some of them will not burn into alkali. Some will usually do so but not always. Some will burn to alkali in some bodies but not in others.

Among those which are not always nor easily so burned are oxalic acid and tartaric. The foods which are rich in oxalic acid are: Rhubarb, pie plant, tea, cocoa, pepper, spinach and sorrel. Most vegetables and fruits contain oxalic acid in some quantity, though the quantity is small. Among other fruits and vegetables in which the conversion or burning sometimes goes wrong are cranberries, pineapples, plums, prunes, apricots. It is understandable that even the very readily burned acids of oranges, lemons, limes, and apples might go wrong with some people.

The fats of greasy foods on the way toward the end product—ash—are liable to split into fatty acids. This is a temporary or passing phase, but while it lasts may produce an acidosis of another kind. And just a word or two as to another phase which scientists bent on studying ash and its effects sometimes overlook.

Even a fruit acid may be unpleasantly sour in the mouth and stomach, that is, before the burning starts. That we instinctively recognize that is shown by our habit of mixing sugar, charged water and other neutralizers in our lemonades.

DOES NOT PROVE ANYTHING.

J. L. H. writes:

1. Is there any danger in putting the arms above the head while sleeping at night?

2. I was told a person died sleeping that way.

REPLY.

1. No.

2. If so, that does not prove anything. Most people died with the arms by the side. Nobody claims that the arms in that position cause death or precipitate it.

What Today Means to You

"ARIES."

IF April 15 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 6:30 a. m. to 8 a. m., from 2 p. m. to 3 p. m. and from 10 p. m. to 11:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 9 p. m.

It is probable that you will benefit through some legal transaction on this date. There will be considerable physical activity and keen sports. An unexpected breach in private relationships. Health not good.

Children born on this April 15 will have rather suppressed natures—they will be affectionate, but it will be difficult for them to show their real feelings. They will be very reserved, and look upon the serious side of life.

There is nothing greedy about your nature. You are quite satisfied with your proper share of any of life's bounties. Moderation in all things satisfies you, whether it be in your work, pleasures or wealth. Accuracy is the keynote to your success in any undertaking. Your painstaking, careful methods are time savers in the long run, however, for knowing every inch of your road, you are not held up for foolish mistakes and wrong detours. You are not handicapped with an inferiority complex, for accuracy breeds confidence, and is the mark of strength.

You are able to give your whole mind to the matter in hand, to see with the mind, and to listen with intelligence. You are not easily distracted. In fact, you are often blind and deaf to things around you, when your mind is sunk in deep thought elsewhere.

Inwardly you suffer from nerves, although there is no outward demonstration that you are ever perturbed and distressed. You complain of the complex din, caused by the present plague of noise. You can not work or sleep through pandemonium. You fight for peace and harmony within the home and in your outside associations. You are rather easy-going and are considered a restful companion. Worthy books are your companions and solitudes.

"Just a few words of praise of your medicine. Nothing gave me relief and health as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did. I am a practical nurse and was so rundown that I was unable to work. I used to suffer agonies at times and would have to lie down the biggest part of the day. After two bottles of Vegetable Compound I felt better. Now I have used ten bottles and feel fine. I recommend it to many of my patients."—Mrs. Florence Johnson, R. R. #3, Chetopa, Kansas.

INJUNCTION SERVED IN STUDENT STRIKE

Two Discharged Professors, Wives, and Youth Are Forbidden to Aid.

PUPILS ARE UNDISMAYED

Harrogate, Tenn., April 14 (A.P.).—An injunction forbidding aid to students on strike at Lincoln Memorial University was issued and was served today upon two discharged professors, their wives and the strike leader.

Granted this morning by Chancellor J. H. Wallace, at Tazewell, the injunction named Profs. M. G. Miller and E. Van N. Diller and Clay McCarroll, expelled president of the student body, and the professors' wives.

J. R. Ketron, attorney and university trustee, said advising or directing the strikers, or in any other manner doing anything which authorities might construe as hindering operation of the university would be a violation of the order. McCarroll also was forbidden to come on the campus. It was the second court action against him. He is under $1,500 bond for hearing Saturday on charges of rioting misconduct.

Seemingly undismayed by the legal proceedings and by a renewed warning that suspension would follow further "rebellion," the students continued their activities unabated. They declared that fewer than 50 of about 415 attended classes. Judge J. H. S. Morison, acting president, said he told them today that suspension will be the penalty for failure to return to classes tomorrow.

The "deadline" thus set will be the sixth day of the strike called by the students as protest against dismissal of faculty members and as a demand for an impartial investigation to determine why the school has not been recognized as standard by Southern and national educational bodies.

The professors and McCarroll have retained John R. Neal, Knoxville, attorney, who is expected to be in Harrogate tomorrow to file answers to the injunction and to eviction notices ordering the professors to leave their homes on the campus. Hearings on the evictions have been set for Saturday.

The hearing of Ernest Fields, senior student, who was arrested Saturday with McCarroll, will be held tomorrow. He has been free on his own recognizance.

IN THE PLAYHOUSE

By JOHN J. DALY

S. E. Cochran and Clifford Brooke offer National Theater Players in "Nancy's Private Affair," a comedy in three acts by Myron C. Fagan.

THE CAST:

Norah (Maid in the Gibson Home) ..... Desiree Harris
Sally Lee ..... Edith Gresham
Billy Ross ..... Forrest Orr
Nancy Gibson ..... Marion Wells
Donald Gibson ..... Walter Gilbert
Mrs. Jane Preston ..Adelaide Hibbard
Peggy Preston ..... Marion Sterly
Henri (Butler in Sally's Home) ..... Edward Poland
Sir Guy Harrington..Romaine Callender

Miss Marion Wells, leading lady of the National Theater Players, steps into the limelight this week in the rollicking farce, "Nancy's Private Affair"—dished up for the delectation of local theatergoers. There is nothing serious in the play by Myron C. Fagan other than the doctrine that clothes make the woman; whereas most people probably thought they made only mere man.

Since "Nancy's Private Affair" gives the leading lady a chance at many wardrobe changes, going from the humbler to the higher and haughtier habiliments, Miss Wells naturally has a chance to become a walking fashion plate. She plays the part well.

The story of the play, in a word or two, has to do with a young wife who goes to seed; neglects her personal splendor and thuswise loses her husband. Upon advice of an old friend of the family, like Eve, the wife turns over a new leaf—and from then on follow complicatoions. then on follow complications. of the play rather quickly.

Forrest Orr, playing the part of the friend and adviser to Nancy, carries the burden of comedy on his shoulders. Mrs. Hibbard comes to the rescue, too. She is cast as a scheming old woman with a gold digger daughter on her hands. How these two fall for the machinations of Nancy is one of the highlights in the comedy.

Marion Sterly plays the little gold digger who has her head, minus her heart, set on the husband of Nancy; because, naturally, Mr. Donald Gibson is a man of money. Miss Sterly manages to convey the idea. The dissatisfied husband is played by Walter Gilbert.

Comes now Mr. Romaine Callender as a diamond king from the fields of South Africa, Sir Guy Harrington, no less.

One Time Ball Player Sentenced for Murder

Harrisburg, Pa., April 14 (A.P.).—Samuel ("Red") Crane, former major and minor league baseball player, today was sentenced to 18 to 36 years in the Eastern Penitentiary for the slaying of John D. Oren and Miss Della Lyter in a local hotel on August 3, 1929.

A sentence of ten to twenty years was imposed for the killing of Miss Lyter, Crane's former sweetheart, and eight to sixteen years for the killing of Oren, Crane's rival for the girl's affections. Verdicts of guilty to second degree murder were returned by the juries which heard the two cases separately. At the trials, the defense contended that Crane had shot and killed the couple while he was intoxicated.

Ponzi's Plea For Pardon Refused by State Board

Boston, April 14 (A.P.).—John W. Wright, secretary to Gov. Frank G. Allen, today revealed that a request for a pardon made by Charles Ponzi, notorious swindler, had been turned down by the State Advisory Board on Pardons Ponzi's mother is reported dying in Italy and the one-time financial "wizard" said he wished to go to her bedside.

Ponzi, now serving a seven-to-nine-year sentence in the State prison, was adjudged a thief on February 15, 1927. Previously he had served a Federal sentence for using the mails to defraud. The advisory board reported that because of Ponzi's bad record it did not believe it advisable to allow him his freedom.

Veteran Actor Undergoes "Rather Serious" Operation.

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—David Warfield, veteran actor who recently underwent what was described as a "rather serious" operation at Post-Graduate Hospital, tonight was reported in a satisfactor condition.

"We do not regard Mr. Warfield's condition as critical," a member of the hospital staff said. "He is no longer a young man and he underwent a rather serious operation, but his condition is in no sense alarming."

Mr. Warfield, whose portrayal f "The Music Master" and other roles endeared him to the theater public some years ago, has been at the hospital three weeks. Previously it had been reported that the actor, who now is 63, was critically ill.

Women Minister Action Wins in New York Vote

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—The Presbytery of New York today voted, 51 to 29, in favor of permitting women to be ordained ministers. The action was taken despite recommendations of the committee on overtures that the proposal be defeated, the Rev. D. B. F. Farber, of the Fourth Avenue Presbyterian Church, chairman of the committee, read the report, which stated that the idea was inopportune.

Dr. D. J. McMillan, secretary of the New York Sabbath committee opposed the action on the ground that women ministers would make the church "effeminate." Dr. David G. Wiley, president of the Lord's Day Alliance, said there was no demand from the congregations for women ministers.

Easter Egg Rolling Promised Children

Col. Grant Announces Plan for Annual Event at White House.

Weather permitting, Washington children of 10 years and under will indulge in their annual Easter egg rolling on the south grounds of the White House Monday. Col. U. S Grant 3d, director of public buildings and public parks, announced yesterday that the grounds would be opened from 9 to 5 o'clock. From 9 to 3:30, only children of 10 years or under will be admitted, except that small children may be accompanied by an adult guardian.

Children's dances will be held between 11 o'clock and noon, and from 2 to 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Music will be furnished by the Marine Band.

A concert open to the general public will be held on the grounds from 3:30 to 5 o'clock.

Rains and recent warm weather have placed the spacious lawn in excellent condition for the egg rolling, which is expected to attract several thousand children.

Girl Bookkeeper Bound As Bandits Get $2,500

Camden, N. J., April 14 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Three bandits, distinguished by their green colored tortoise rimmed glasses, staged here today the third daylight robbery in less than a week at the jewelry store of Abe Fuhrman & Son. They bound the bookkeeper, Miss Beulah Eckard, 17 years old, of Merchantville, N. J., with twine and looted the show cases of jewelry valued at $2,500.

Last Friday the same men looted a store of $7,500 in cash and checks and earlier in the week the customers and employes of another drove off the men after an attempted holdup.

THE grandest scene-painter in the world—Mother Nature herself—has been busy in the Shenandoah Valley. At Winchester, Virginia, will be held next week—Spring's most beautiful pageant—the Apple Blossom Festival. If you have never been to the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival leave dull care behind and plan now to drive there this year.

White locust trees will march along the highway as you pass. Already yellow honeysuckle clambers on rail fences. The countryside is splashed as never before with lilacs . . . dogwood . . . redwood and sweet judas trees. And mile upon mile, like patches on a crazy quilt, pink, white and green, the Shenandoah apple orchards drench the air with fragrance.

TARIFF CONFEREES HOIST SILK DUTIES

House Group Victorious in Fight for Increase in Textile Rates.

PAPER LEVIES REDUCED

(Associated Press.)

American manufacturers of silk and rayon products, including clothing of all descriptions, were given increased protection yesterday by the tariff bill conferees, who concluded adjustment of differences between the Senate and House over three more schedules of the Hawley-Smoot measure.

Besides the silk and rayon schedules, the congressional tariff adjusters completed work on Senate amendments to the papers and books rate section, leaving only the sundries schedule and the free list for discussion before the controversial administrative clauses are reached.

Senate and House leaders expect to wind up the conference work this week on the less disputed provisions. A report, however, can not be made until the House thas voted on sugar, cement, lumber, shingles, casein, and possibly silver, and the Senate has been asked for instructions regarding the export debenture provision and the repeal of the presidential rate-changing authority.

The most important change in the paper schedule was the acceptance of the House rate of 5 per cent and 30 per cent, respectively, on plain and sensitized photographic paper. The Senate had provided that existing levies, which are greater, be retained.

The House conference group scored their first big victories in the controversies over textile rates. They forced the Senate conferees to accept the House duties of 65 per cent on silk clothing not specially provided for, an increase of 5 per cent over the present law, and 45 cents a pound and 65 per cent on rayon clothing not mentioned specifically in the bill. The House minimum levy of 45 cents a pound on rayon yarns also was accepted. A compromise was reached whereby an additional cumulative duty of 45 cents a pound would be levied on thrown rayon or yarns having over twenty "turns twist" per inch.

Grade Crossing Deaths Bring Suits for $20,000

Suits for a total of $20,000 damages were filed yesterday in District Supreme Court against the Pennsylvania Railroad as the result of a train-automobile crash last October 22 at Landover, Md., in which Mrs. Edith Lemmons and her young son, Milan Lemmons, were killed. The suits were filed by Douglas Lemmons, a member of the Washington Fire Department, as administrator of the estates of his wife and son.

Through Attorneys Alvin L. Newmyer and Albert W. Jacobson, Lemmons alleges that the fatal collision was caused by negligence of the railroad in failing to have safety gates or adequate signal devices at the grade crossing. It also is charged that the watchman at the crossing carelessly invited the automobile, in which Mrs. Lemmons and her son were riding, to cross the tracks ahead of an express train.

Son Sues His Father To Break Partnership

Dissolution of Welch Realtors, 719 Fifteenth street northwest, and sale of all its assets are asked in a suit filed yesterday in District Supreme Court by Harry S. Welch, jr., against his father, Harry S. Welch, a copartner, and two banks in which the funds of the firm are said to be deposited.

The younger Mr. Welch tells the court that difficulties have arisen between him and his father which jeopardize the business. He alleges that his father has instructed the two banks not to honor checks drawn by him on the firm's account and has told other persons that his son is no longer a member of the organization. Mr. Welch, jr., asserts that two years ago he held a responsible position with a local title company and that his father persuaded him to become a member of the firm. Attorney William C. Sullivan appears for the petitioner.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients, naming them Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, causing a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless no-good feeling all out of sorts, inactive bowels, take one of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

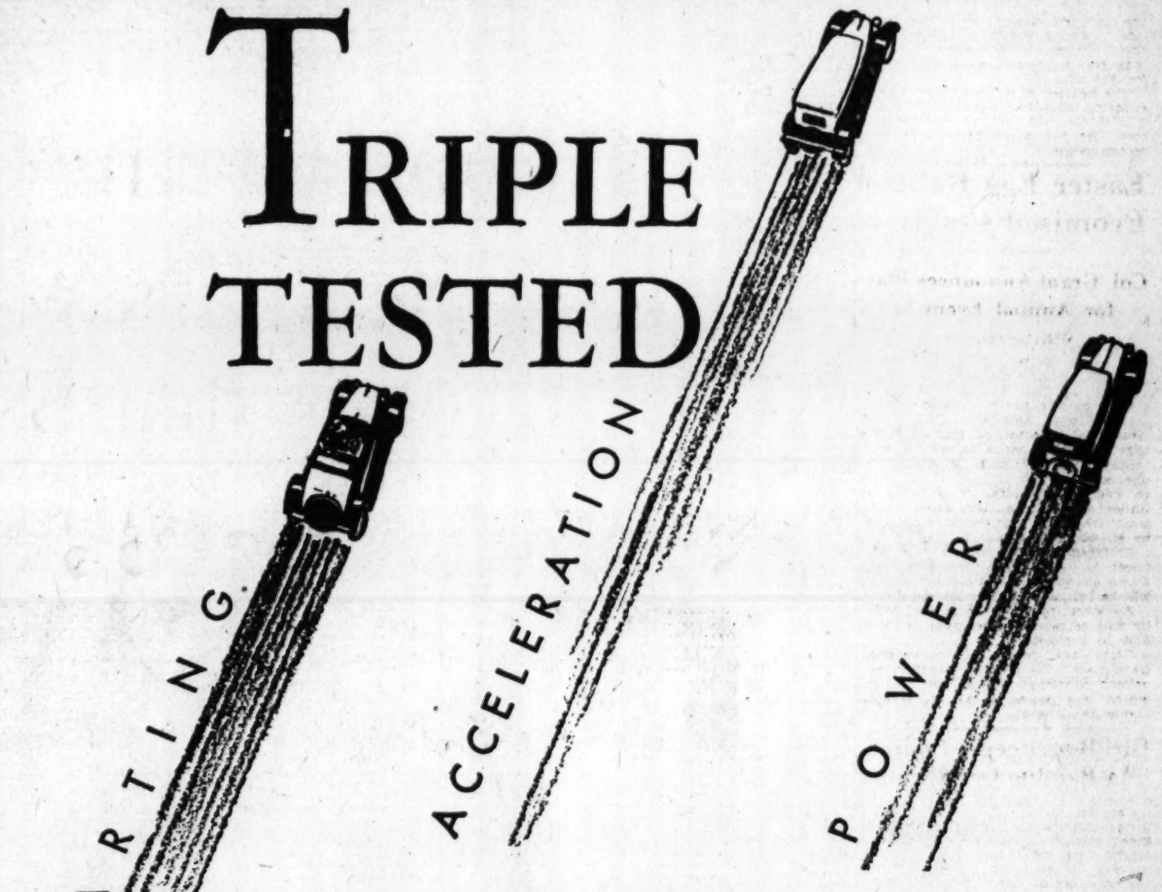
TRIPLE TESTED



CONOCO Gasoline is actually tested dozens of times in the process of refining--but it is called Triple Tested Gasoline because all of these tests converge into three main tests--for starting--acceleration--power!

These are the things that motorists want--and are entitled to get--from the gasoline they use. A gasoline may be ever so powerful--but if it is not volatile enough to start the motor quickly and give rapid acceleration in traffic--it will not satisfy today's demands. And easy starting, swift acceleration, are mere snares if they are not backed up with power for every need--economical power!

CONOCO Gasoline meets all three of these important practical tests--that's the reason so many people insist on Triple Tested--

STOCK PRICES DROP SLIGHTLY; DULL DAY

Westinghouse 8-Point Rise and Allied Chemicals's Loss Are Features.

TELEPHONE SHARES GAIN

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—The stock market appeared to get off on the wrong foot at the beginning of the new week today and stumbled around throughout the session without getting anywhere. The majority of stocks closed slightly lower, the price index of 90 shares showing a loss of more than a point, although professional speculation for the rise was moderately successful in a handful of issues. Total sales of 4,149,530 shares were the smallest for a full session in three weeks.

Business and trade reports coming to hand over the week-end were moderately cheerful, indicating slightly better steel mill operations in some centers and a brisk revival of retail trade with the approach of Easter. The market's moderate response to strenuous operations for the advance last week appeared to have made traders cautious, however, and the fact that new State income taxes are due tomorrow probably caused considerable liquidation of stocks to raise funds. Furthermore, the fact that the market will close for the rest of the week on Good Friday has had a tendency to dampen speculative enthusiasm for the moment. Reactionary wheat and cotton markets also had a retarding influence on stocks.

Money was fairly firm, call loans commanding 4 per cent throughout the day. Moderate loan calling by banks was attributed to preparation for the midweekly settlement at the Federal Reserve and for payment by the Government tomorrow of about $131,000,000 in interest on the Fourth Liberty loan. Credit conditions throughout the country continue to improve gradually, the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank today reducing its rate from 4½ to 4 per cent.

American Telephone Earnings.

The outstanding corporate news of the day was the first quarter earnings statement of American Telephone, showing net of approximately $40,400,000, a reduction of about $5,000,000 from the previous quarter, but approximating the profits of the like quarter of last year. The fact that the company was able to duplicate the results of the like period a year ago, in the face of slack conditions, was generally regarded as reassuring. Rumors that the company will shortly issue new stock at $100 a share at the rate of one share for six held, which amounts to cutting a melon of about $336,000,000, continue to circulate about Wall street, the stock was a strong feature of the market, rising 5 points to a new 1930 top at 274¼, and closing at 272.

Westinghouse Electric rose 8 points to a new 1930 peak at 198½, and other strong spots were the American Tobacco issues, International Harvester, International Telephone, Lehman Corporation, Manhattan Electric Supply, National Air Transport, Monsanto Chemical, Missouri, Kansas, Texas and Grigsby Grunow, selling up 2 to 5 points to new 1930 tops, although not all gains were maintained to the close.

Several low priced issues were bid up in wheat appeared to be efforts to attract public following, such shares as Aviation Corporation, North American Aviation and Budd Manufacturing rising a point or so to new highs.

Merchandising Shares Active.

Some of the merchandising shares were well bought, reflecting easier trade prospects. Gimbel Bros' Federated Department Stores and Hahn Department Stores sold at new highs for the year. Remington Rand was again firm, rising 1½ points to the best level for the movement, in response to several favorable analyses recently issued by commission houses.

Several shares lost 2 to 5 points, including Allied Chemical, American Chain, Coca Cola, Columbia Graphophone, Corn Products, Eastman Kodak, Loew's and Warner Quinlan. U. S. Industrial Alcohol was again a bear target, dropping 7 points to a new 1930 low at 94¾. U. S. Steel closed off ¾.

Wheat futures tumbled 3 to 4 cents a bushel on reports of needed rains and in sympathy with Liverpool. Sugar was practically unchanged, as traders awaited action by Cuban producers on the single selling agency. It was announced after the close that dissolution of the agency had been approved.

Foreign exchanges were dull and irregular. Sterling cables sagged 3-32 to $4.86 11-32.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—Cotton was lower today under realizing or liquidation which appeared to be prompted by relatively easy Liverpool cables, somewhat smaller domestic consumption figures for March than anticipated and reports of rain in the Southwest over the week-end. Early declines were followed by moderate rallies, but there was renewed selling in the late trading when the market reached the lowest levels of the day, with May selling at 16.13 or 24 points net lower. That delivery closed at 16.15, with general market closing barely steady at net declines of 17 to 22 points.

The opening was steady at declines of 6 to 12 points, with active months showing net losses of about 8 to 16 points during the first few minutes under realizing which may have been combined with some local selling on the disappointing cables and consumption figures. Spot house interests were buyers of near months at the decline, however, and the market steadied up during the middle of the day on a belief that the rains shown by the detailed weather reports in the Southwest had not been sufficient to fully relieve droughty conditions. This led to some covering by early sellers and the market recovered all but 4 or 5 points of its early losses, but the demand was not active and prices weakened again, July selling off to 16.14 and the new October contract to 15.04, closing at these figures. New Orleans was relatively easy late in the afternoon and sent some selling orders here while a little selling for Western account was attributed to weakness in wheat. There were reiterated reports that cotton was heading toward New York for delivery on contract next month, but the selling of old crop months was attributed chiefly to realizing by scattering longs or the undoing of old straddles between near and late months.

The report of the Census Bureau showed domestic consumption for March amounting to 508,576 bales exclusive of linters, compared with 495,204 in February and 631,669 in March last year, the figures for March being about 25,000 bales below recent forecast.

Liverpool reported continental and Bombay selling had been absorbed by trade calling there.

Exports today, 15,026, making 6,075,376 so far this season. Port receipts, 4,554. U. S. port stocks, 1,757,428.

BONDS OFF SLIGHTLY AS CALL FUNDS RISE

RAIL AND U. S. LISTS SAG

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—A firmer tone in the money markets incident to the midmonth requirements of corporations and the Treasury's operations eased bond prices today. Quotations held fairly steady during most of the quiet session, but there was a trend toward lower levels in the late dealings when the unofficial rate on call loans was boosted to 4½ per cent.

Aside fro mmoves in a few convertibles, the session was colorless. Demand came chiefly from institutional sources, but inquiry from banks was reported as very small and many of the last hour offerings were taken at price concessions of about half a point. The standard statistics composite price for 30 bonds dropped to 99.7, the lowest since March 12. Despite this rather poor showing, however, the heaviness was by no means universal and numerous representative issues showed net gains.

The two telephone convertibles were the day's leaders. Both the American and International 4½s rose 2 points net, the latter touching a new high at 129½ while the other came within an eighth of duplicating its 1930 peak. Both traded in large volume. Atchison 4½s moved up 1⅝. Amusement bonds were dull.

The easiness was most pronounced in the rails. Atchison General 4s, Kansas City Southern first 3s, New Haven 4½s, Pennsylvania 3½s, Southern Pacific 4s and Southern Railway 4s sagged from ½ to 1 point. Rock Island 4s, Chicago & Northwestern 5s, Nickel Plate "B" 5½s and Baltimore & Ohio "D" 5s, on the other hand, improved to about the same extent.

In the semispeculative section, St. Paul adjustment 5s touched a new low at 70¼, closing at the bottom; Missouri, Kansas, Texas adjustment 5s also sagged. Bonds in that category are of course affected by trends in earnings.

United States Governments sold off 8 to 10-32ds, reflecting the firmness of money. Foreign bonds were irregular. Steady liquidation in Berlin City Electric 6½s, off about a point, was in anticipation of a new issue. Sugar issues eased.

Changes in the domestic industrials averaged small, but the tendency was downward. American Smelting 4s, Liggett & Myers 5s, Lorillard 5s, Youngstown Sheet & Tube 5s, and U. S. Rubber 5s yielded small fractions. Utilities were firm.

BANK CONVENTION PLANS DISCUSSED

Details of Annual Event in Asheville Outlined by Vass at Dinner.

TO GIVE REDUCED RATES

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

More than 250 members of the District of Columbia Bankers Association and their guests heard plans for the association's twelfth annual convention outlined last night by George O. Vass, general chairman, at an enthusiastic pre-convention dinner at Columbia Country Club.

The convention is to be held at Grove Park Inn, Asheville, N. C., June 5 to 8, and the banking problems and topics to be presented there require the attendance of as large a representation of bank officers and directors as possible in order that every member bank may derive the fullest benefit.

Business sessions will be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 5, 6, 7, until luncheon, leaving the afternoons and evenings free for recreation. The convention place offers golf on an excellent course, tennis on perfect courts, motor trips through the mountains, horseback riding on gaited mounts, hunting and fishing. The traditional "family dinner" will be held Saturday night and will provide an evening of unsurpassed entertainment.

Special Convention Train.

The special convention train of two sections, all Pullman, with club, diner and observation coaches on each, will leave Washington, Wednesday, June 4, at 6 o'clock in the evening, and will reach Asheville in time for breakfast. Returning, the train will leave Biltmore near Asheville, at 5:30 o'clock on the evening of June 8, permitting two hours of daylight travel through mountain scenery of splendor, and arriving here at 7 o'clock Monday morning. Dinner will be served on the train going and returning without additional cost.

Special reduced rates for hotel accommodations and railroad fares secured by the convention committee keep the entire cost, including Pullman berth, down to $85 per person. Compartments both ways, accommodating two, are $8 per person extra; drawing room, both ways, accommodating three, $7 per person extra; for two only, $12 per person extra. The first call for the convention, a folder adorned with views of the convention hotel and its beautiful surroundings, is being issued today.

Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, and Carter B. Keene, prominent local attorney, were speakers at the dinner and George O'Connor was master of ceremonies, Matt Horne assisting. President Wilmer J. Waller, of the association, presided, and First Vice President Lamler P. McLachlen and Secretary C. H. Pope were in charge of arrangements. In the afternoon, members played golf for the cup donated by Past President Robert V. Fleming as an annual trophy for this occasion.

Prominent Guests at Banquet.

Among the guests were Gov. Roy A. Young, of the Federal Reserve Board; Gov. George Harrison, of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York; Maj. W. O. Woods, Treasurer of the United States; Deputy Comptrollers of the Currency F. G. Awalt, J. L. Proctor and E. H. Gough; W. P. Folger, chief national bank examiner; Walter Wyatt, general counsel of the Federal Reserve Board; J. C. Noell and E. M. McClelland, assistant secretaries, Federal Reserve Board; E. E. Mountjoy, secretary, national bank section, American Bankers Association; Herbert T. Shannon, president of Columbia Country Club, and Arthur B. Shelton, secretary.

W. A. Conway, representative from the home office of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Philadelphia, will visit his company's local agencies this week. During his visit a luncheon will be held at the Racquet Club tomorrow, which will be attended by every company agent in this region. At this luncheon, Everett Eynon will act as a company agent and other agents as policyholders in the staging of a sales demonstration.

The Fleming Cup in the golf tournament was won by Maj. Erskine Gordon, trust officer of the Federal American National Bank, and the prize for the low gross score was awarded to C. B. Asher, of the Liberty National Bank.

Minneapolis Reserve Sets 4 Per Cent Rate

NATS BOW TO RED SOX, 4 TO 3, AS 23,000 SEE INAUGURAL; 250,000 IN MAJOR LEAGUE CITIES TO GREET PLAY TODAY

Pegler

NEW YORK, April 14.—The only high-class game of general appeal to the customers which is still produced at a retail price of one dollar, a click at the turnstile will begin another championship season tomorrow and it is worth noting that the baseball industry, unlike the prize fighting industry, has escaped the plague of millionaires.

The common customer still dominates the attendance at the ballyard, whereas at the prize fights he has been relegated to the rear rows, dispossessed by the very best people whose coming to the fights has elevated only the price of admission.

John Heydler, the president of the National League, tells me that the magnates in the major league are carrying pay rolls of from $200,000 to $300,000 nowadays as compared with a range of from $85,000 to $125,000 twenty years ago. They have replaced the frame arenas of the past with steel and concrete plants, their assessments have risen as the cities have grown up around their plots and the noncombatant staffs of the baseball firms have grown in proportion to the general elaboration of the business, but the price of a ticket for a grand stand seat has been nudged only once and then by the mere sum of two-bits.

Matter of Prid-
Among Magnates.

Mr. Heydler says this is a matter of considerable pride among the baseball magnates, adding something of rather noble sound about democracy and while one may sniff at the altruism thus implied, the fact remains that no other business in the great American sport industry with its present investment and annual turn over amounting to hundreds of millions, gives as expert a show for twice the price.

I am beginning to sense a new enthusiasm for baseball as performed in the major and high minor leagues, due, I think, to the fact that a millionaire at a ball yard is just another customer and that the ball game is the thing, by contrast with the various battles of the century, the generation, the decade and the split-second at which the names of the principals in the ring might just as well be listed under the heading of also present were——."

Millionaires Are Nice
In Own Environment.

These millionaires are said to be nice people in their own surroundings, so that I assume they began attending the prize-fights only for the opportunity to patronize the lower classes sitting off to the rear because the matches for which they have paid the highest prices have been generally bad and worth no more than $1, ringside, judged by the expertness of the performers.

Moreover, if millionaires are presumed to be people of culture and delicacy, then they can have no more genuine enthusiasm for the great pigstickings which they have attended to the exclusion of the people who really belong at the ringside by social right than a scholar has for the ghosted writings of the heavyweight champion.

Customers Have no Eye
For Celebrities.

The only people who can command mention in the newspaper accounts of a routine championship ball game, aside from the standardized ceremonies of opening day and the world series, are the incumbent president of the United States and Charles A. Lindbergh. The customers have no eye for celebrity except on the ball field; and a full attendance of the late Mr. Rickard's very best people, who set the steerage to oggling and pointing on fight nights, would only evoke impatient yelps of "down in front!"

It has been a good thing for baseball not only as a business, but as the pleasure of the common customer that the best people have never taken up the game in an ostentatious way. If they had done so, then the seating arrangements would have been recharted and the prices revised, with proximity to some broker who sleeps in a gold bedroom as the standard of values.

In time the cost of watching the Yankees play the Athletics from a front seat would have been $50 at the box office or twice that much at the scalpers'; the players would have been signing on by the game, not by the season and the common customer would have had to go to Scranton, New Haven or Reading to see baseball played as it should be.

FANS AWAIT OPENING TO CHEER CLUBS AND SCAN NEW FAVORITES

Grove Faces Yanks in Philadelphia Inaugural.

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

AIRPLANES may buzz overhead, divots may fly thicker than ever on the golf courses, and pop may be disguised by the use of paper cups, but the good old-fashioned American game of baseball comes into its own again today—all along the major league battle front.

Times have changed and so has the game that one time featured beards and sacrifice hits, instead of $80,000 salaries and home runs, but it is still the grand old national pastime, with all the tumult and shouting, the band playing, the flag raising and the kids who share with grizzled fans the thrills of opening day.

With the balmy touches of spring to paint a seasonable background, the sixteen teams of the National and American Leagues today complete the swing into action that was begun appropriately in the National Capital yesterday when President Hoover joined the crowd that saw the Boston Red Soxs win the opener from Washington.

In the National League the champion Chicago Cubs start their campaign at St. Louis, while Boston plays at New York, Philadelphia at Brooklyn and Pittsburgh at Cincinnati.

If the weather's favorable attitude continue uninterrupted, the prospects are that approximately 250,000 spectators will witness the total of eight games scheduled. The National League openers are expected to contribute most of this total, around 133,000, with at least 115,000 more fans crowding their way into American League parks.

Detroit Crowd Likely To be Biggest.

The biggest crowd of the day seems likely at Detroit, with 40,000 or upward expected to take advantage of ideal weather to jam Navin Field and see Bucky Harris' 1930 edition of the Tigers play the St. Louis Browns.

The New York Giants estimate 40,000 will witness their getaway at the Polo Grounds against the Boston Braves.

Crowds of 30,000 to 35,000 are predicted for the openers at Philadelphia, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Chicago, where the White Sox, opening against Cleveland, is to be seized as a means of paying tribute to the new manager, Donie Bush. Donie's friends plan to give him a chest of silver and voice the hope that all the pleasant things said this spring about the Sox come true.

Not to forget their champions, however, 5,000 other Chicago fans have formed for a march upon St. Louis to cheer Manager Joe McCarthy's Cubs. To stimulate this pilgrimage, Dr. Louis Eastman, who did the team a good turn by curing Catcher Gabby Hartnett's arm, hired a special train for his own delegation of Cub rooters, all hoping to see the Bruins break their habit of being opening-day losers.

Athletics Primed for Yankees.

The world's champion Athletics, barring a last-minute contract hitch with their great outfielder, Al Simmons, are primed for a rousing getaway on home grounds against their arch rivals, the New York Yankees. Robert Moses Grove, the southpaw ace of the A's, is the choice to send the champions away where they left off last October—winners. The expensive cast led by Babe Ruth and managed for the first time by Bob Shawkey, counts upon the good right arm of George Pipgras to match anything Grove can produce in speed or curves.

Nothing in the last few frenzied days of "doping" the pennant races has upset the general expectations that the Athletics and Cubs will repeat their conquests of 1929 and meet again the world's series next fall.

Connie Mack's Athletics go to the post at even money proposition against the field, while the Cubs are rated by Wall street as 7 to 5 favorites.

New York, Cleveland and Detroit, possibly along with St. Louis, are rated as the principal American League threats, in that order, while Pittsburgh and New York remain the choice of most critics to give the Cubs plenty of trouble.

Two clubs, however, in the National League—Brooklyn and Philadelphia—and one in the American, the White Sox, have shown sufficient stuff to warrant the prediction they will at least cause a flock of trouble to the favorites. This is especially true of Brooklyn, generally looked upon as the most improved team in the National League and an outside threat to completely overturn the dope.

Fandom to Inspect
New Players.

Fandom, apart from the arguments over the relative powers of rival teams, is prepared to turn out for an inspection of their favorites—old as well as new. Every team in either league has new material to present for the vital tests. Several, such as the Giants, Braves, Robins, Yankees, Tigers and Reds, present radically altered line-ups for the 1930 campaign.

For the opening day, at least, newcomers such as Chapman, Cooke, Jolley, Suhr, Berger, Marshall, Lopez and Funk share the spotlight with such hardy veterans as Ruth and Hornsby, whose combined salary checks for this year reach a new high level of $120,000.

Mills to Visit Shore, Seeks Hilltop Camp

In an effort to select a site for a football training camp to be used next September, Athletic Director Tom Mills, of Georgetown University, will visit Atlantic City next week. For the past five years, Georgetown football squads have held early season training on the Atlantic Coast, last year's squad working out at Ocean City. The latter site will be used in 1930 by Temple University.

Mills has postponed spring football training at the Hilltop until after the Easter holidays. Two weeks of scrimmaging then will conclude activities of the gridiron squad until September.

Griffiths-Von Porat Bout Tentatively Listed

Chicago, April 14 (A.P.).—Tuffy Griffiths and Otto Von Porat, Chicago's ranking heavyweights, will meet in May at the Chicago Coliseum—if Griffiths defeats Jack Gagnon April 30.

Matchmaker Nate Lewis has signed up Von Porat and plans to hold the bout May 14 or 28, if Griffiths wipes out Gagnon's recent technical knockout victory, the Sioux City, Iowa., and Chicago puncher will get the assignment. If Gagnon wins, Lewis has indicated he will give the Boston heavy the shot.

INSECTS WANT GAMES.

HOLDOUT

AL SIMMONS.

Simmons Holding Out for Raise on Eve of Inaugural

PHILADELPHIA, April 14 (A.P.).—Connie Mack, manager of the world's champion Athletics, today confirmed the fears of the fans that Al Simmons, slugging outfielder of the A's, is a hold-out.

Throughout the training season, the tall manager of the A's consistently refused to discuss Simmons' status, but late today he admitted that Simmons had not yet signed a contract for 1930.

Unless there is an overnight agreement between Mack and his star outfielder, the hard-hitting fly catcher will be missing from the opening game with the New York Yankees at Shibe Park tomorrow.

Manager Mack would say nothing as to the salary Simmons was demanding and would make no other comment except that he made the announcement of Simmons' status because he did not want fans to come to the Athletics-Yankee game and be disappointed in not seeing Simmons in the outfield.

Simmons Threatens To Return Home.

Simmons would not talk, but according to friends he says he will pack up and return home to Milwaukee unless he and Mack come to terms soon.

Spencer Harris, who was with the Minneapolis Club of the American Association last year, probably will be seen in the A's outfield tomorrow.

Simmons arrived here on Friday and played through the final game of the city series against the Phillies on Saturday. His home run was the only score against the Phillies, who won the game, 5 to 1, and with it the city championship.

It was generally believed then that all talk about his being a holdout was baseless rumor.

Nats Acquire Webb, Reds' Outfielder

Big and Hard-Hitting Lefthander Claimed on aWivers.

Spencer Reports and Signs; Brown Hurls Today at Boston.

THE acquisition by the Nationals yesterday of Outfielder Earl Webb, obtained from the Cincinnati Reds via the waiver route, is expected to add considerable punch to Manager Johnson's team. As a matter of fact, it is not beyond the realms of possibility that the newcomer, who will join the Nationals in Boston today or tomorrow, may earn himself a regular berth.

Webb, who is 30 years of age, 6 feet 1½ inches tall, and weighs 190 pounds, is an experienced man who knows what it is all about. He has been in the majors on one or two previous occasions but was with the Los Angeles Club last season, where he hit at a .357 clip. He is a left-handed batter but pegs in the orthodox manner. That Webb is a slugger is indicated by the fact that he was credited with 37 homers, 6 triples and 56 doubles last season.

The White Sox think that they have a great star in Smead Jolly, who cost them $40,000, but the records show that Webb was a more timely hitter as he drove in 164 runs—many more than did Jolly in about twelve more games.

Brown to Pitch
At Boston.

Lloyd Brown will do the Washington hurling this afternoon in the regular season's opener in the City of Culture, with Irving Hadley due to draw the assignment tomorrow and Bob Burke scheduled to show his wares to the Red Sox on Thursday.

Catcher Roy Spencer, who has been holding out for his last season's salary, or close to it, decided to report yesterday and arrived in the morning and signed his 1930 contract at the figures offered by the club. He will have to get himself into playing condition satisfactory to Manager Johnson before his name goes on the pay roll. He says this will not take him long, however, as he has been working out for about three weeks at his wife's home in Atlanta. Spencer did not accompany the Nats to Boston last night.

Typical Opening Day.

It was with mixed feelings, including no small amount of curiosity, that approximately 23,000 fans viewed Washington's 1930 baseball inaugural at the Clark Griffith stadium yesterday. This, incidentally, was an exclusive opening as far as other cities were concerned, for elsewhere all of the major league teams marked time while President Herbert Hoover, Vice President Curtis and most of the members of the Cabinet put the official seal of the Government on the national game as such.

Outwardly, it was a typical opening day crowd and the game was staged in the typical Washington setting. All were at the stadium to have a good time and most had it, despite the fact that there was some natural disappointment at the Boston Red Sox's 4 to 3 victory over Manager Johnson's Nationals. The prearranged program was followed to the letter with but two exceptions—the ball tossed out by President Hoover was declared a wild pitch by the official scorer, while Assistant Secretary of War Trubee Davison had to "bat" for Secretary Patrick J. Hurley, who was ill, on the march to the flagpole.

As there were a hundred or more on hand when the gates were scheduled to be opened at noon, these were admitted a little earlier and they and others who showed up before 1 o'clock had nothing to hold their interest except watching the Nationals in practice, with Altrock and Schacht occasionally pulling a stunt or two. From 1 to 2:30, between which hours most of the crowd found its way into the park, a band helped the minutes to pass and plenty of action was crowded in the remaining half-hour before play started.

Army Band Leads Parade.

The Army Band made its appearance promptly at 2:30 and, after giving a sample of its wares, led the parade to the flag pole. As usual, this gave all who had ever seen any drilling a big laugh, as each player on both teams seemed to be out of step, although Assistant Secretary of War Davison and President Clark Griffith, the leaders, managed to do fairly well in this respect.

After Old Glory had been unfurled to the satisfaction of all concerned, Manager Johnson presented President Hoover with a ball which was supposed to be tossed to Umpire in Chief Van Grafian. The Chief Executive, with only last year's practice behind him, uncorked a wild pitch, the sphere was retrieved and then play started.

It was at this stage that the mingled feelings of the fans was so

Rally in Ninth Fails; Goslin Nipped off 3d With Bases Full.

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH
(Sports Editor of The Post).

THE Nats made their 1930 debut yesterday and the Red Sox stole the show. In the matter of hits, the Nats were superior with ten to nine for Boston, but in the highly important item of runs the Red Sox were the more attentive to opportunities and won the ball game by the close but sufficient figures of 4 to 3.

President Hoover was conspicuous with members of his Cabinet and Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British Ambassador, in the assemblage of 23,000 that greeted the start of the big league season. And the President, hewing again to the Coolidge policy that was his platform, tossed out a ball that proved an ill omen to Washington hopes. In the last three years of Republican administration at opening-day ceremonies, the Nats have failed to win the game.

Garland Braxton, rushed to the relief of Fred Marberry in the seventh inning, proved a welcome relief to the Red Sox, who were trailing by a run at the moment after having made only five hits off Marberry. Action against Braxton was deferred until the eighth inning, when the Red Sox clustered three hits and a sacrifice for the two runs that decided the game.

Dire consequences were forecast for Marberry in the preceding inning, the sixth, when he shocked all in attendance by rapping out his second successive hit, a double to left field and scored two runners to give the Nats a two-run lead. Taking the mound in the seventh, Marberry walked two, allowed two hits and one run before he was extracted in favor of Braxton with the bases full. Braxton escaped the inning unscathed.

West Revives Hope
In Ninth.

The Nats picked up the flickering torch of competition in the ninth, fanned it to flame with an incipient rally and then allowed it to sputter and die. Two were out and Washington was trailing by a run when Sam West, perpetrator of three consecutive strikeouts in his last three times at bat, slammed a double to the fence in right field. But Goslin drenched all hopes with a fly to Oliver in center field.

Goslin was the "goat" of the Nats' defeat. He was on third base in the first inning after a hard single to right and Rice was across with one run and Myer and Cronin were also on base when the irrepressible "Goose" provided the first laugh of the game, and it was tragic. Joe Judge popped a weak foul to Catcher Heving along the first base line, and, along some line of reasoning peculiar to Goslin, the "Goose" stamped half way down to home plate in a grand display of daring. His mistake dawned upon him shortly after when Heving wheeled and tossed to Miller on third base to complete a double play.

Thus was erased Washington's grandest opportunities to score a cluster of runs.

Smith Is Puzzle in Last 3 Innings.

Danny MacFayden was the pitching choice of Manager Heinie Wagner, making his debut as the Red Sox leader, and the former Somerville High schoolboy allowed three runs and eight hits during the six innings he worked. George Smith pitched for Boston thereafter and he restricted the Nats to no runs and three hits for the remainder of the battle.

Both teams fielded flawlessly with no mechanical errors recorded. Two brilliant pick-ups and throws by Oswald Bluege were the defensive highlights. Phil Todt monopolized batting honors as the only player to make three hits, one of which was a double. Marberry and Judge, with

Fighter Saves His $9; Breaks Hand on Thug

Chicago, April 14 (A.P.).—It has cost Pete Wistort, Chicago heavyweight boxer, a fractured left hand and several opportunities to engage in his business, to save $9 from a hold-up man.

Wistort, who has been out of action several months following injuries to the same left hand, was accosted last night by a man with a pistol, as he was walking home. When ordered to "stick 'em up," Wistort thought of his nine bucks and promptly let the hold-up man have both fists to the head.

He scored a knockout, grabbed the pistol, left the man lying on the sidewalk and hurried home to discover the left hand had crumpled. Now he is wondering if the $9 will last until he can fight again.

Mack and McCarthy Face Race Confident of Outcome

STATEMENTS made by the managers of the major league championship clubs to the Associated press in connection with the season's opening follow:

By CONNIE MACK
(Manager World Champion Philadelphia Athletics).

Everything appears rosy as another baseball season starts. I expect baseball in general to have one of its best years. From past experiences we have found that in times of business depression baseball flourished better than ever before.

Of course, the same conditions may not prevail this summer. We have to find that out. But I am very optimistic.

The Athletics are not claiming a pennant because we realize every team in the league has been strengthened, and we look forward to a close race. Of course, I have every confidence in my players.

I think the baseball public will see some surprises this summer from teams that have been counted out.

By JOSEPH V. M'CARTHY
(Manager, Champion Chicago Cubs).

Additional strength secured for the Cubs leads me to believe they will repeat in the National League this year. The return of Hartnett and the presence of Bell or Blair at third base are improvements over last year. If Blair continues to improve as he has been doing, he will make Bell hustle to keep his job.

We figure to get at least one good pitcher out of the batch of newcomers, and our regulars of last year ought to go through in good style.

We expect competition from Pittsburgh, New York and St. Louis, and in that order. Philadelphia's batting strength will serve to tighten up the race, and if the Phillies get better pitching they will be troublesome to some of the first division clubs. Cincinnati ought to have an improved ball club.

Barring accidents and breaks that are unforeseen, the Cubs will come down to the finish a winner.

Former Big League Player, 61, Is Dead

Allegan, Mich., April 14 (A.P.).—Frank R. Kitson, 61, former big league pitcher, died suddenly at his farm home near here last night. He had suffered from a heart ailment the last five years.

Kitson began his baseball career with the western Michigan teams. He successively played with Baltimore, Brooklyn, Detroit and Kansas City.

Board of Managers Of A. A. U. to Meet

The regular monthly meeting of board of managers of the District of Columbia Association of the Amateur Athletic Union will be held next Monday night, starting at 8 o'clock, at the Jewish Community Center, Sixteenth and Q streets northwest.

Helen Moody Grooms Net Game at New York

New York, April 14 (A.P.).—Helen Wills Moody, world's woman's tennis champion, has arrived in New York for a series of practice matches designed to get her into condition for defense of her French and British singles titles.

Mrs. Moody has played frequently in California this winter, but plans several exhibition matches here with Elmer Griffin. She will sail for Europe aboard the Berengaria on April 22. In addition to defending her singles titles at Auteuil and Wimbledon, Mrs. Moody will play in the Wightman Cup matches against England.

While here Mrs. Moody will attend an exhibition of her drawings and paintings at the Grand Central Art Galleries.

GUN ROYAL WINS HAVRE DE GRACE FIRST FEATURE

Hustling Ride By Workman Helpful

10,000 See Favorite Outrun Stand By; Ned O., Third.

Earle Sande Returns to Saddle Amid Applause.

By J. B. SNODGRASS,
(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

HAVRE DE GRACE, April 14.—M. Stern's Gun Royal, 1-to-2 favorite in the Tip Top Purse, opening-day feature here, was an easy winner at the end of 6 furlongs, as had been predicted by every handicapper, from the Washington Monument in Baltimore to William Penn's Statue in Philadelphia.

If there was one horse which everybody knew would win it was Gun Royal and particularly was this opinion strong among the Philadelphians, who got their first glimpse of Eastern racing this afternoon.

The Baltimore contingent, strong as it is for the Maryland horse, Ned O., was forced to agree on Gun Royal's merits, but held out that Ned O. was second best for today only, the assumption being that he is going to improve greatly in order to represent Maryland in the Kentucky Derby. But Ned O. was not second best; it was Brandon Stables' Stand By, which finished two lengths back of Gun Royal and a length and a half ahead of Ned O. Young Kitty, Black Diamond and Expedite completed the field in the order named.

Workman Has Easy Ride.

Sonny Workman was up on Gun Royal and had an easy ride. He waited behind the pace set by Young Kitty for 3 furlongs or so and then let loose of his hold on Stern's horse. The gelding left Young Kitty and the others and scampered to the front to stay there, untroubled by the challenge of Stand By. The winning time was 1:12 4-5.

As for Ned O., his race was as good as could be expected. He is a slow beginner, and usually needs a hole to get through in the closing stages of a race. If there is no hole, Ned O., despite his great closing rush, can't get far. He was blocked in last year's endurance in this manner after being made the favorite on the strength of his Walden victory.

He has been given speed work throughout the spring to keep him closer up in the early stages, and this showed to some effect; still, he was next to last when he made his run. He passed two horses and was running up on the third horse to finish when the end of the race was at hand. He carried 107 pounds, as against 113 for the winner.

Sande's Popularity Remains.

That Earl Sande has not lost his popularity with the public was attested when he passed the grand stand on his first mount in his comeback, in the sixth race. The handclapping was long continued and generous. He had heard the call of the turf again. But he could not win. He was a contender to the sixteenth, after getting away with Rock Slide on his toes, but Cudgeller was too much for the field and won won by two lengths. Rock Slide had tired out and Fire Opal got the place. Danger Signal was third. But the cheering was again prolonged for Sande. Cudgeller, Cannon up, paid $10.50.

Sande, long considered America's premier jockey, made his third return to the saddle when he took the mount on Rock Slide in the sixth race, the claiming event. When Sande was nearly killed in an accident at Saratoga in 1924, he was thought to be through with the saddle. But he made a comeback in the spring of 1925 at Havre de Grace.

Sande Failed in Third Comeback.

Sande added to his riding laurels from then until the 1928 fall meeting at Belmont Park; when he announced his retirement from the saddle to take up the training and owning of horses. His mount that day was Chance Shot and the race the Jockey Club's Gold Cup. But Sande's new venture met with only indifferent success and last spring he again took to the saddle, riding his own horse Hermitage, at this meeting and also Sarazen.

Then Sande could only ride his own horses in Maryland and could not ride at all in New York because he was an owner and trainer. Subsequently increasing weight kept him out of the saddle. While he worked horses late last year and was invited to Chicago with permission to ride, he was not up again until the spring when he galloped horses at Belmont Park for Joseph E. Widener, his old contract employer.

Today, Sande has only one horse, Nassak, in whom he invested $35,000. This cost was greater than all his other horses put together and when Nassak went wrong in training it started Sande's difficulties which caused him to dispose of all his holdings save Nassak, who is again in training after his long lay-off.

Sande taking the mount on Rock Slide, made that fellow the favorite but Sande's comeback luck failed. When he came back in 1925, his mount was Sarazen and he won. He won last year with Hermitage. Sande was accorded cheers and applause in the parade to the post and also when he came back after the finish. Cudgeller was the winner of the race.

Sonny Frank Upset Assistant Starter.

Fourteen 2-year-olds which paraded in the first race were the signal for the opening of spring racing at Havre de Grace. A light mist was falling when the smart field walked into the Waite starting gate, where there was a delay of a few minutes while Sonny Fronk floored an assistant starter. The least interesting thing about a race track is the knocking down of an assistant starter.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson's High Cloud colt, Up, won all the way, finishing four lengths in front of H. P. Whitney's Pennant colt, Pennate. Sustain, early pacemaker, quit in the stretch and Jimmy Jingle got the show money. Sustain finishing fourth. The winner was $6.10, coupled with Abduction. The two favorites were Pennate and the winning entry, Up, coupled with Abduction. Time, 0:54 2-5.

George D. Widener's Gerard won at the first asking when he wore down Genuine in the second race to get an easy verdict and paid the liberal odds of $21.40. Genuine, after setting a fast pace, tired, but managed to weather the field to get second with Virado third and Equation fourth. The winning of Gerard was a tribute to Jockey Eaby, who rode the Ambassador gelding. Prominent from the start, he was held in restraint until Genuine wore himself down and then Eaby came long at an even stride to win by three lengths. Three lengths also separated Genuine and Virado. Virado never did any particular running until he reached the stretch. He paid $10.70 to show. The time was 1:13 2-5 for six furlongs. The start was good. Battle On, from the Glen Riddle Stable, showed early speed.

Mole Hill Surprise In Fith Race.

The Harwood, third race, brought to the barrier eight 3-year-olds of high class. Flimsy, with Hebert up, by a sparkling stretch run won for the Harry Payne Whitney Stable by a half length. E.-K. Bryson's Jimmy Moran was second, beating Chlo Boy for the place by a nose. Betty Beau, after a game race, was fourth. Maestro showed a flash of speed. Flimsy paid $14.30. The Broomstick filly ran the five and a half furlongs in 1:07 1-5. Chlo Boy was the favorite. He was always prominent in the running.

The fifth race, which with the withdrawal of Fire Brigade, left a field of only four, resulted in a disappointment when Fairy Maiden, shortest favorite of the afternoon, showed a sharp form reversal when she failed, largely due to a bad ride by Cimerak, finishing third. Mole Hill owned by Mrs. O. Cheney, was the winner and Arcturus was second. Nostaw was the other starter. Arcturus set the pace Nostaw, formerly Lord Bredalbane, was well up with Fairy Maiden third. She began getting in trouble on the far turn in and out of the pockets and in the home stretch lost ground in coming to the outside and closed fast but had no chance. The winner had a margin of a length, then a nose separating the second and third.

Another favorite scored in the final number. Blazing Cinch, a 3-to-2 choice, continued to show improvement and accounted for the victory with comparative ease. Fair Gold was second and Prairie Girl was third. Blazing Cinch was much the best, leading Fair Gold to the wire by five lengths.

Aztec Nine Returns To Unlimited Ranks

The Aztec Unlimited Nine, which made a strong bid for the Capital City League title last season, has been reorganized and will engage in a practice game tomorrow at 5:30 o'clock with the Army Medical Center Nine on the Walter Reed diamond.

Hoffman and Rhodes, former Auth players, have joined the squad, which includes McGuire, Brown, Fulmer, Walker, Bucky Buscher, Dick Keefer, Jody Barry, Johny O'Brien, Mulhall, Much and Burch. The Aztecs have a diamond for Saturday and wish to meet some strong team. Call Mulhall at West 1284.

two safeties each, led Washington's attack.

One hit in the first three innings was the allotment of the Red Sox at the hands of Marberry. Barrett opened the game by beating out a grounder to Bluege, but Miller fouled to Bluege, Oliver filed to Rice and Scarrett lifted to West.

Nats Take Lead in First Inning.

Then the Nats took the lead. West was out on a fly to Oliver, but Rice slammed a single over second base and went to third on Goslin's liner to right. MacFayden hit Myer on the foot to fill the bases and Rice scored on Cronin's Texas leaguer to right. At this juncture, with the bases full, Goslin galloped down the base line while Heving was waiting for Judge's pop to settle in his mitt. A quick throw to third beat Goslin back to the bag and the inning was over.

The Red Sox went out in order in the second with Regan and Todt flying out to West and Narlesky lining to Bluege. Marberry passed Heving, the first man up, and Bluege came to his rescue with a flashy pickup of MacFayden's bunt to throw Heving out at second. Barrett fouled to Bluege and Cronin fielded Miller's grounder to make the putout on MacFayden at second, unassisted.

Boston tied the score with a run in the fourth, Oliver leading off with a single to center and advancing on a sacrifice bunt to Bluege by Scarritt. Regan filed out to Rice, but Todt responded with a double that scored Oliver. Bluege threw out Narlesky.

MacFayden held the Nats hitless in the second inning. Bluege grounded to Narlesky, MacFayden hit Ruel and Marberry advanced Ruel with a sacrifice bunt, but West contributed the first of his three strikeouts.

In their half of the third, the Nats drew one hit as their portion. Rice grounded to Todt and Goslin filed to Oliver. Myer singled through the box, but Cronin sent a long foul to Rothrock.

After tying the score in the fourth Marberry held the Sox hitless for two innings. Heving, MacFayden and Barrett went out in order in the fifth and Miller, Oliver and Scarritt followed suit in the sixth. Rice, Goslin and Myer were easy outs in the fifth but in the sixth the Nats broke the tie.

Marberry Drives in Two in Sixth.

Cronin grounded to Narlesky to open the inning but Judge followed with a double. Bluege popped to Heving. Ruel grounded to Mil'er who elected to tag Judge on the base lines but the latter was safe with a pretty slide and Ruel was safe at first. Marberry then astounded all and sundry with a clean double to left field that scored both Judge and Ruel. West closed the inning with his second successive strikeout.

Serious trouble set in for Marberry in the seventh. Regan fouled to Ruel, but Todt singled to center. Narlesky walked and Heving scored Todt with a single to right and the Red Sox pulled to within a run of the Nats. Marberry was waved out in favor of Braxton. Barrett and Rothrock hit the ball hard, but lined to Bluege and West, respectively.

Hits by Todt and Narlesky Drive in Two.

The eighth brought the Nats' downfall. Oliver led off with a single through short and Scarritt was safe on his attempted sacrifice when Bluege's throw to get Oliver at second was late. Regan struck out, but Todt scored Oliver with a single to center and when Narlesky duplicated the hit, Scarritt scored. A fast double play started by Cronin on Heving's grounder and finished by Myer and Judge, averted further damage.

The Sox threatened mildly in the ninth when Smith led off with a single down the third base line. Barrett bunted and Braxton's throw to second was too late, all hands being safe. Ruel then picked Smith off second base and Myer contributed the second out by going far back for Miller's fly. Scarritt grounded to Braxton.

One hit was the portion of the Nats in the last three innings. Rice filed to Scarritt, and Goslin and Myer lifted to Oliver in the seventh. In the eighth Cronin filed to Scarritt, Judge popped to Heving and Smith threw out Bluege. Ruel led off the ninth by grounding to Smith, and Pinch Hitter Barnes was tossed out by Regan. West rammed a double to the fence in left, but Goslin could only line to Oliver to end the game.

Prep School Netmen In Match Today

Play in the Prep School Tennis League will be continued today with the netmen of Gonzaga and Friends coming together on the latter's court. In previous matches, Georgetown Prep won from St. John's while St. Alban's forfeited to St. John's through inability to put a team on the court.

Coached by Viau, Massachusetts champion, the Gonzaga racqueters are hoping to get off on the right foot today with Capt. Peak and Tommy Dunn leading the way. O'Conner, Flynn, the McGrath brothers, Viau, brother of the coach; Long, Jenkins, Raedy and McKavanaugh, are all ready to play for the Purple. Manager Edward Langley is desirous of booking games with all local high schools. He may be reached either at the schol or his residence, 123 E street southeast.

—Havre De Grace Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 14. While the first big stake of the Havre de Grace meeting, the Harford Handicap, $10,000 to be renewed Wednesday, is awaited eagerly, there is no decrease in the interest of the day, today's overnight programs and the showing of a better class of 2-year-olds than have have been racing adds zest to the sport.

FEATURE RACE—The Edgewood, a mile and 70 yards, in which five old horses have been entered. STAR O' MORN finds his distance in this race. He was asked to go sprint distances at Bowie which did not increase his chances. He is in tip-top form, lightly weighted and should come in first under a pull. STAR O' MORN ran third in the Bowie Inaugural, but his best chance is the longer races and all conditions seem favorable in the Edgewood. ORMONBIRD, a much improved racer, on Bowie form, should be a contender and should there be a change in track conditions he might be benefitted. Ormonbird's best recent race was third to Joe Marrone III. GLOSSINS, according to the clockers, has shown some fast workouts and may be a keen contender.

FIRST RACE—This race is for maiden 3-year-old fillies. LILLABELL showed some flashes of speed as a 2-year-old and should be hard to beat. SUN FRANCIS has been marked down in fast workouts and may be contender. G. D. Widener has a pair of fillies, FINITA and TORRENTIAL which should prove a factor. FINITA is the main reliance in this entry. MOMBASSA has speed but favors a heavy track. POINCIANA is another one not to be entirely discarded.

SECOND RACE—Fifteen 2-year-olds comprise the field, with two more knocking at the door on the eligible list. After the sterling race at Bowie of H. P. Whitney's EQUIPOISE, defeating Glidella and Dry Dock with all ease at Bowie, comes up again as the logical horse and is the best 2-year-old so far shown by Mr. Whitney. Many believe this one to be equal of Vanderpool. TOTEM is to be coupled with EQUIPOISE, but being on the eligible list, may fail to get in the race. SCARLET, from the Dixiana Farm, is entitled to second consideration, being fast in workouts, well bred and well trained. SAKI has given proof of what she can do by an impressive victory at Bowie. DRY DOCK may cut a figure, but has very powerful opposition and does not quite rank with those already mentioned. This is the kind of race that will throw much light on the quality of the 2-year-old division and should be, and no doubt will be, the outstanding feature in public interest.

THIRD RACE—SUN MEDDLER, a temperamental but a fast horse, has been marked up as the most probable winner among the large field that starts in the third race at 6 furlongs. Claiming secondary honors very likely will be found the mystery horse, MALOLO. Observers expect a fine race from this one. CHARLEY J. S., on established form, should get in the money.

FOURTH RACE — CRAZY COOT, Harry Payne Whitney's Derby candidate and winner of the National Stallion Stakes at Belmont Park last year, should win the Glen Oaks purse for colts and geldings. This will be his first start this year. BILLY BLAKE, a fast one on Bowie form, should be the contender and will be backed by many to win. TOP KICK, from the Audley Farm, will figure in the race.

SIXTH RACE—FRIAR'S HOPE is selected to win this race and will be at a long price. If it should happen, this one has been stepping fast in morning workouts, so look out. BILL SETH should be the contender and MAXIVA, at the reduced impost, may be dangerous. GAY PARISIAN also looks formidable.

SEVENTH RACE — BLUE DARTER has been training nicely and seems to be well placed. MATIN'S MINISTER, if he runs back to his best Bowie race, will be formidable rival. BOYISH BOB or RED CROSS PRINCESS for show money.

HAVRE DE GRACE ENTRIES.

GEORGETOWN NINE SEEKS 10TH STRAIGHT TODAY

Lomax Faces Bucknell at Barracks

Fourth Victory Aim of Pitcher; Team Rates High.

Hilltop Nine Invades Philadelphia Fields Tomorrow.

CONSECUTIVE victory No. 10 is the goal Georgetown's baseball team hopes to reach today when Bucknell's Nine is met at Washington Barracks, starting at 3:15 o'clock. If the Hoyas succeed, they will have equalled the entire number of wins registered by last year's Georgetown diamond outfit.

Bill Lomax, sophomore pitcher who has three wins to his credit in as many games thus far, probably will take the box against Lewisburg collegians. Little is known here of the strength of Bucknell, but Georgetown is not worrying over the outcome; that is, not unduly. Coach Red Smith's team is not looking for a "set-up" but at the same time feels confident of taking the better end of the score.

G. U. Rates High In East.

In winning nine out of ten games played to date, Georgetown has impressed both critics and fans and it is reported that the entire Eastern section of the collegiate world has gained a wholesome respect for the prowess of the Blue and Gray team. Later on, Georgetown will tackle two of the recognized leaders of collegiate baseball—Holy Cross and Boston College. The results of those games will have much to do with the final ranking accorded Georgetown.

On Thursday Bucknell will invade Brookland Stadium to oppose Catholic University's tossers. The Cardinals, smothered by Harvard last Friday when they lost their first game of the season, doubtless will be out to atone for their intial setback and begin winning ways anew. Lou Hurley, ace of Coach Gagnon's mound staff, will be the pitching choice.

Georgetown opens a two-day visit in Philadelphia tomorrow in a game with Pennsylvania, one of the strong teams of the East. On Thursday the Hoyas will meet Drexel, a team they defeated rather easily here early this month.

G. W. Tennis Team Beats Maryland, 7-2

Facing their first collegiate opposition of the season, George Washington University's tennis player yesterday handily defeated the netmen of Maryland University by a score of 7 to 2 on the Edgemoor Club courts. Neither team showed its leading players, Bob Considine, of G. W., being absent on account of employment, and Louis Kurland, of the Terrapins, being forced to remain at his books in Baltimore.

The Colonials, of whom fine things have been predicted, took five of the six singles matches and two of the three doubles. Alan Staubly and Bill Seidell, two of the more experienced of the G. W. array, won their singles battles from Capt. Rosenbaum and Freeman, respectively, of Maryland, and then paired to beat the same Terrapin duo in the doubles.

Tomorrow George Washington will meet Johns Hopkins' Team in Baltimore.

SINGLES.

Staubly (G. W.) defeated Rosenbaum (M.), 7—5, 6—2; Seidell (G. W.) defeated Freeman (M.), 6—3, 6—4; Zdse (G. W.) defeated Lucas (M.), 6—2, 6—1; Roberts (M.) defeated Gable (G. W.), 6—3, 6—4; Jacquette (G. W.) defeated Duckman (M.), 4—6, 7—5, 8—1; Rosen (G. W.) defeated Spencer (M.), 9—7, 6—2.

DOUBLES.

Seidell and Staubly (G. W.) defeated Rosenbaum and Freeman (M.), 6—3, 6—3; Spencer and Robertson (M.) defeated Jacquette and Rosen (G. W.) 7—5, 6—4; Edze and Gable (G. W.) defeated Roberts and Lucas (M.), 3—6, 6—4, 7—5.

William-Mary Cubs Beat Va. Frosh, 8-1

Special to The Washington Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 14.—William and Mary's first year nine defeated the Virginia freshmen here today by a score of 8 to 1, mainly due to the superb pitching of Dizenzo, who did not yield a hit until the eighth inning.

The Cavaliers' twirler also acquitted himself well. He fanned an even dozen, but received poor support, especially at shortstop.

Nats Sport Numbers; Other Notes of First Game.

in evidence. Old favorites were given a big hand as they made their first appearance at the plate, there were jeers as well as cheers given Goose Goslin, showing that the fans had taken sides in his salary argument with President Griffith, and there seemed to be a general sentiment that all wanted to see the Nats win.

However, it easily could be seen that the fans were a little leary. Last year, after burning up the Grape Fruit League, the Nationals flopped as soon as the season got under way and the cash customers evidently were wondering if this would be the case this season, hence a lack of spontaneous enthusiasm until after the team really gave a demonstration of its ability.

Crowd Finds Self In Sixth.

When the first run was made in the opening round, there was a mild lifting of eyebrows and comparatively little enthusiasm shown. This changed in the sixth, however, when Pitcher Fred Marberry doubled home two runs to put the Nationals 2 up and all were rooting like the crowds of the old pennant-winning days of 1924 and 1925 from then on, with the gloom thick enough to be cut with a knife when the Red Sox staged their winning rally in the eighth.

Even in the ninth, when with two out, West doubled and Rice walked, the fans stuck in the hope that their idols would rally to victory. They almost prayed to Goslin to deliver, and no one can say that he did not try—for he fouled off several hard-hit balls, finally lashing one to center, which Outfielder Tommy Oliver just managed to snare at arm's length above his head.

The Nationals did not win, it is true, but they showed enough to turn passive fans into rabid ones and all who saw the game wended their way home convinced that Johnson's team stands an excellent chance of upsetting the seventh-place dope which the experts have handed out.

Due to the opening day ceremonies, the game was ten minutes late in starting, but no one seemed to mind.

Both teams were bedecked in their new uniforms, those worn by the Nationals being quite similar to their 1929 livery except that numbers were plastered on the backs of Johnson's men for identification purposes.

An addition to the Boston uniform, and one which may cause them to be called the Pilgrims instead of the Red Sox, is a tall hat, similar to those worn by the John Aldens when the Mayflower first landed at Plymouth.

Judge Registers First Protest.

Joe Judge registered the first protest of the season when he disagreed with Umpire Bill McGowan's ruling on the first play of the game. From the press box, it looked as though the "blind man" was right, Rothrock thus drawing a hit on a slow roller down the third-base line. He got no farther than first base, however.

There was considerable handshaking in the Griffith Stadium yesterday, all of the rival players greeting each other like long-lost brothers. Sam Rice even stepped off of third base in the first to exchange grips with the veteran umpire, Tommy Connolly.

Bob Reeves, local favorite who used to toil in a Washington uniform, had to give way to Substitute Miller yesterday due to a bad cold. The former "Rambling Wreck of Georgia Tech" has won himself the regular berth, however, and may be in the game tomorrow.

Both Todt and Regan sent Sammy West far back for long flies in the Sox's second inning.

Goose Goslin must have been busy counting the crowd in the Nats' first and not have had his mind on the race. With the runways loaded, he wandered too far off third base and was doubled up by Catcher Heving, following the catch of Judge's pop-fly.

Danny MacFayden found the Nats good targets, winging two in the first two frames. Myer in the first and Ruel in the second.

Bluege Same Fielding Flash as of Old.

Bluege made a really great play which helped Marberry out of possible trouble in the third. After Heving had walked as a starter, MacFayden, trying to sacrifice, popped one just out of Marberry's reach. Bluege cut across, took the ball on a bounce after it apparently had passed him and pegged to Cronin in time to force Heving at the middle sack.

Usually a first baseman is kept busy from the start of a game, but Joe Judge did not have a chance until the fourth inning yesterday.

Three sound smacks were wasted by the Nationals in their fourth, due to the fact that a double play, the second made by the Sox at that stage, came after Judge had opened with a liner to right. Then Ruel and Marberry got safeties, but both were left when Sam West fanned for the second straight time.

Pitcher MacFayden paid his rival, Marberry, an unintended compliment while at bat in the fifth. After missing a second strike by feet, he asked "Umps" Van Grafian to take a look at the ball. Nothing wrong was found with it, Marberry then shooting another strike over which Danny missed by as wide a margin as he had the others.

The umpires—Roy Van Grafian behind the plate, Bill McGowan at first and Tommy Connolly at third—were all dolled up in blue uniforms, a change from the greenish khaki color scheme of the past few seasons.

Speaking of the "guessers," it might be mentioned that McGowan was seen standing inside the diamond on a number of occasions, which was not in accordance with President E. S. Barnard's recent ruling, unless an exception is made when there are runners on the bases.

Nats Get Break In Sixth.

The Nationals benefited from a good break in the sixth when, with two out and Judge on second, Ruel shot a hot bounder to Miller. After catching the ball, and with plenty of time to catch Judge heading for third, he let the Nat captain elude him and all hands were safe. Marberry then scored both Judge and Ruel with a Texas league double to left which got past Scarrett.

Marberry walked Narleasky on four straight balls in the Sox seventh, following Todt's Texas League single with one dead. This walk later was turned into an alien run, when Marberry walked Pinchhitter Sweeney to fill the bases. Johnson yanked Marberry in favor of Garland Braxton, who wiggled out of this tight hole.

Scarrett went well over toward the left-field line to snare Rice's liner in the home seventh. The blow looked like a sure hit as it left Sam's bat.

A most questionable decision by Umpire Connolly proved mightily costly to the Nats in Boston's eighth. After Oliver had singled, Scarrett laid down an intended sacrifice. Bluege tried for a force-play at second and apparently nailed his man, but the umpire said not. This decision made it possible for the Sox to forge into the lead as they

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

LION RECOMMENDED FOR POST OF SMITH

Alexandria Bar Association Supports Candidacy of Manassas Man.

EASTER HOLIDAYS BEGUN

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

A committee was appointed yesterday by Gardner L. Boothe, president of the Alexandria Bar Association, to draw up resolutions of regret at the recent resignation of Judge Howard W. Smith from the circuit court bench in order to devote his time to his candidacy for the House of Representatives to succeed Representative R. Walton Moore, who has indicated that he will not again be a candidate. The committee, which is composed of former Judge Robinson Moncure, Judge William S. Snow, Charles Henry Smith and Albert V. Bryan, will present their resolution to the bar association to be inscribed on the minutes, and a copy will be sent to Judge Smith.

The association then indorsed the candidacy of Thomas Lion, of Manassas, to succeed Judge Smith, in the following resolution, offered by Attorney J. Randall Caton:

"Whereas heretofore the members of the bar of the City of Alexandria, both in meeting assembled and as individuals, have indorsed for the judgeship members of this judicial circuit; and

"Whereas, as yet no appointment of such preference has been made;

"Now, therefore, be it Resolved, that the members of the bar of the City of Alexandria, Va., in meeting assembled, this 14th day of April, 1930, do hereby unanimously declare that the appointment of Mr. Thomas Lion, of Manassas, will meet with our universal approval."

This resolution, which was unanimously passed by the 25 members of the association present, will be sent to Gov. Pollard.

Motorcycle Policeman Clarence McClary, who was injured early yesterday morning when his machine collided with an automobile driven by Raymond Skillman, at the intersection of Prince and Henry streets, is confined to the Alexandria Hospital, suffering from injuries to the shoulder and several ribs.

Policeman McClary, at the time of the accident, was answering a call to the Southern Railway yards that a woman had been robbed. He is understood to have been going south on Henry street, and Skillman, driving an automobile belonging to Walter S. Smith, his employer, was traveling eats on Prince street, when the two machines collided. Skillman was released on bond of $1,000 for his appearance in Police Court, while McClary was taken to the hospital in an unconscious condition.

Policeman McClary is a brother of Sergt. Charles McClary, who was shot and killed about a year ago by a Negro who, police believe, was "Kid" Lilly, who was at the time a fugitive from justice. Lilly made his escape, and although he has been heard from several times as having been arrested and turned loose before the arresting officers were aware that he was wanted, has never been apprehended either for the alleged shooting of Sergt. McClary, the reputed murder of a North Carolina police officer, or a felonious assault on a woman understood to have been his wife, in Rappahannock County.

The public and private schools of Alexandria will close for the Easter holidays, all of them reopening Tuesday, April 22. The first to close was St. Agnes Episcopal School for Girls, which began its holidays last Friday. St. Mary's Academy will close at 3 o'clock this afternoon; the Xaverian School and St. Mary's Parochial School will close tomorrow, and the various public schools will close Thursday.

The Episcopal High School and the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia, located west of Alexandria, will not have any Easter holiday. They have an annual holiday prior to Easter, based on the number of school days, thus obviating a holiday period at Easter.

Newly elected officers of Alexandria Lodge of Elks were installed last night, the ceremony being performed by John Dillon Fitzgerald, past exalted ruler of Washington Lodge of Elks.

The new officers are James Reece Duncan, exalted ruler; John W. Tulloch, esteemed leading knight; Parke A. Kersey, esteemed loyal knight; Frederick P. Russell, esteemed lecturing knight; George H. Railing, secretary; Herman Friedlander, treasurer; Thomas Downey, tiler, and Jerome Kaufmann, trustee.

Elliott F. Hoffman, retiring exalted ruler, was presented with a gift by the membership of the lodge.

St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal Church choir will present the cantata "Golgotha to Gethsemane" tonight at 8 o'clock, in the church, under the direction of Sherman B. Fowler, the organist. The words of Christ will be sung by Wilmer Joyce Waller; the words of Peter, Pilate and the Beloved Disciple by Stephen H. Field, and the part of Judas by Clarence Wells. The Angel will be sung by Miss Margaret Ogden; Mary at the foot of the Cross, by Mrs. Evelyn Howard Sheridan. These soloists will be assisted by a large chorus.

The convention of the northern Virginia section of the Holy Name Society will be held in this city on April 27 next, presided over by M. J. McFarland, the president, when about 50 delegates are expected to attend.

Mrs. Margaret Shaver, aged 57 years, wife of L. B. Shaver, of Manassas, Va., died on Sunday evening in the Alexandria Hospital, and the funeral will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon in Manassas, conducted by the Rev. Ryland T. Dodge, of the Baptist Temple.

Besides her husband, she is survived by four children, Mrs. Ruth Cornell and John W. Shaver, of 329 North Columbus street, Alexandria; Mrs. Sadie McIntosh, Dickerson, Md., and Miss Agnes Shaver, of Manassas; also four sisters, Mrs. Ella King, Mrs. Fannie Person, Mrs. Dolly Shinn, and Mrs. Mary Jeffries, and two brothers, Samuel and John Costello.

The local Rotary Club will formulate plans at the meeting today, presided over by President Nelson Gray, for attendance at the district meeting of the Rotary organization, to be held in Richmond on May 8 and 9.

The American Legion post of Alexandria will sponsor the performance in this city on April 29 of Sparks Bros.' circus, the funds derived therefrom to be used in the restoration work of Gadsby's Tavern.

Daughter of Pollard Is Chosen Fete Queen

SUZANNE POLLARD
Governor's daughter and First Lady of Virginia, who has accepted an invitation to preside as queen over the seventh annual Shenandoah apple blossom carnival in Winchester.

Governor and Staff to See Apple Blossom Carnival.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., April 14.—Miss Suzanne Pollard, daughter of Gov. John G. Pollard, of Virginia, will reign as "Queen Shenandoah VII" over the seventh annual Shenandoah apple blossom festival here April 24 and 25, it was announced tonight by Director General Nelson F. Richards.

Miss Pollard is the first daughter of a State governor to be thus honored and likewise the first resident of southeastern Virginia to be chosen for the festival's highest honor. Gov. Pollard and staff will attend the celebration, and it is expected that the Richmond Blues will be the queen's personal escort in the triumphal parade, April 25.

Recent warm weather has caused early fruit trees to burst into bloom, but reports made to the executive committee by the Weather Bureau in Washington and by fruit experts indicated that most varieties in commercial apple orchards will not blossom until Easter week, and that the bloom will remain on the trees at least five days.

The committee expressed confidence that all orchards in the Winchester district will be in bloom when the festival is held.

VIRGINIA OFFICIALS GUILTY OF BRIBERY

Magistrate, Deputy Sheriff of Patrick County Get Prison Terms.

THREE RESIGN OFFICES

Special to The Washington Post.

Stuart, Va., April 14.—With two county officials sentenced to the penitentiary upon conviction of bribery, three other resignations accepted by Circuit Judge J. Turner Clement, and with the chairman of the board of supervisors facing ouster proceedings, Patrick County was in a state of perturbation today.

A political feud is alleged to have caused charges being made, these reaching the ears of R. E. Woolwine, Commonwealth's attorney, who summoned witnesses before the grand jury, which returned indictments.

J. D. Weatherman, magistrate, was convicted of receiving a $900 bribe from Arthur Joyce, a Negro arrested for a liquor law violation, and was sentenced to serve four years in the penitentiary. He appealed and is at liberty on $5,000 bond.

Deputy Sheriff E. E. Boyd pleaded guilty to a bribery indictment and was given two years in the penitentiary. He was accused of receiving $25 and half a gallon of brandy to drop a case against two men arrested for violating the liquor law.

Magistrate John T. Harrell, cleared of a prohibition law violation, tendered his resignation at the request of the judge, and W. S. Duncan, game warden, convicted of a liquor law violation, also resigned, as did C. L. Hatcher, against whom no accusation had been brought. C. L. Ayers, chairman of the county board and supervisor since 1927, was charged in the ouster petition with receiving dual compensation from the county, in that he hired teams to the county in addition to his salary.

It was shown that he saved the county money by doing so. The jury failed to agree on Saturday, whereupon a new petition seeking his removal was filed by fourteen taxpayers, hearing being set for June. Judge Clement, in dealing with the bribery cases, said from the bench, "Public officials who accept bribes are a greater menace to society than the lawbreakers themselves."

CUTS IN INCOME TAX TO START WITH 1930

Virginia Commissioner Says Reduction Not Effective Until 1931 Filings.

RETURNS DUE BY JUNE 1

Richmond, Va., April 14 (A.P.).—Reductions in State income tax approved by the General Assembly apply to income earned in 1930 and not before.

This was made plain in a statement here today by C. H. Morrisett, State tax commissioner, who said some taxpayers are laboring under a misapprehension as to when the increased personal exemptions become effective.

"The General Assembly of 1930 increased the personal exemption allowed a married person from $2,000 to $2,800, and that allowed a single person from $1,000 to $1,250, but the act expressly provides that the increases are to affect individual returns filed in 1931 covering income during 1930 and not before," said Mr. Morrissett.

Personal exemptions set out on the individual income tax return blanks prepared for use this year are correct for 1930, Mr. Morrissett stated—$2,000 for a married person and $1,000 for a single person.

The increased exemptions, he stated, will relieve of all State income taxation approximately 14,000 persons and will amount to a tax reduction of more than $300,000 in 1931.

"The total number of individuals assessed with current State income taxes in 1928 was 45,092, the total taxes being $1,933,069.18, Mr. Morrissette stated. "Upon this basis the reduction of $300,000 in 1931 will amount to a reduction of more than 15 per cent in the amount of the taxes to be payable in 1931, and to a reduction of more than 31 per cent in the number of persons liable to the State income tax."

Individual income tax returns must be filed in Virginia by June 1.

Daily O'Currences

By JOHN DALY

WE went to see the opening game. It was Luella's first offense.

"Oh, my," she exclaimed, viewing the crowd, "aren't there a lot of people here!"

Just then the President threw out a baseball, starting the game.

"I didn't know the President played baseball," said Luella. "Why doesn't he wear a baseball suit like the other players?"

"The President really doesn't play. He just throws out the first ball——"

"Oh, I see. And the Vice President catches. Is that it?"

* * * *

"THE Vice President doesn't play either."

"Why? Hasn't he got a baseball suit?"

"You don't understand, Luella. Neither the President, nor the Vice President, nor the Cabinet——"

"Oh, I know about the Cabinet," she said, "they play medicine ball——"

The game started. The Red Sox were at bat, Washington in the field.

"Where is 'Babe' Ruth?" asked Luella, as the crowd roared out encouragement for Washington.

"HE'S with the Yankees," I told her.

"But aren't these gentlemen Yankees?" she asked. "They're from Boston. You told me so yourself."

"Of course, but they're not Yankees. They call 'em the Red Sox——"

"The Red, White and Blue Sox would be a better name for Americans," flashed Luella.

One of the Bostonians slid into second base, a cloud of dust submerging him.

"If they keep that up," said Luella, "they'll be the Black Sox——"

* * * *

AS a two-bagger was made, Luella rose and shouted.

"Isn't it thrilling!" she cried, clapping her hands. "He made a home run, didn't he? Bet his wife'll be glad. They can have an early supper. Come to think of it, we'd better be going——"

"Going? Why, it's only the seventh inning. All up, stretch!"

"What's everybody standing up for?" she asked.

"To shake the peanut shells off their clothes," I told her—and she believed, it.

BOMB CASE INQUIRY CONCLUSION IS NEAR

States Attorney's Absence Delays Investigation in Prince Georges.

MAN HELD IN CAR CRASH

Contrary to expectations, the Prince Georges County grand jury did not complete its investigation into the Seat Pleasant bombing case yesterday but will continue its inquiry today. The jury was unable to complete its work because of the absence of State's Attorney J. Frank Parran, who was engaged in trial of a civil case in court and unable to be in the grand jury room.

It is believed that the grand jury will complete its investigation today and that it is possible that the indictment or indctments charging the murder of Naomi Hall Brady, 18-year-old expectant mother, and her sister Dorothy and brother Thomas presented to the court.

Lawrence Leroy Brady, Washington automobile mechanic, is in the Upper Marlboro jail on charges of murder in connection with the bombing. His brother, Herman, widower of Naomi, was one of the witnesses before the grand jury yesterday, it is believed, although police continued to maintain a close guard on the hallway leading to the grand jury room to prevent newspaper men from seeing and hearing too much. Mrs. Ella Brady, mother of the two brothers, another brother, Emmett; Norris Hall and Leslie Hall, the latter two Naomi's brothers, were waiting to be summoned.

The grand jury has returned thirteen indictments so far, it was announced yesterday. These include two charging John Slade, former Gallenger Hospital orderly, with assault with intent to kill on Leo Patrick McDonald and Arthur J. Middleton in the course of an argument and fight on the southern Maryland pike February 7.

Other indictments returned were: John P. Marcus, nonsupport; Donnie Harrison, statutory; William H. Gettings, nonsupport; Oliver Sellmer, statutory; Norman E. Allen, nonsupport; Vernon Seaburn, Buck Hamilton, Glen Fincher and James Russell, housebreaking and larceny; Levi Beale, larceny and receiving stolen goods; William Collins, assault with intent to kill, assault and battery; Henry Pickerell, statutory, and Lewis T. Freeman, alias Red Simms, jail breaking.

Joseph Dreyer, of Chicago, race horse owner, yesterday morning was charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor as the result of an accident late Sunday night which resulted in injuries to three persons at Laurel.

Dreyer is alleged by police to have been the operator of an automobile which turned from the Baltimore Boulevard into a side street in Laurel in front of a towing truck operated by Mark Willie, of Laurel. Dreyer and his wife were thrown from opposite doors. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bailey, who were passengers on the rear seat, also were injured.

Dreyer's head was cut and his wife was bruised and cut and is believed to have internal injuries. Mrs. Bailey was cut on the chest. They were treated by a physician at Laurel. Dreyer was arrested by State Policeman C. C. Serman and taken before Justice of the Peace William Scott, of Laurel, who fixed bond at $127.50 on charges of driving while under the influence of intoxicants and reckless driving.

Milton Chaney, of near Laurel, was sentenced to serve six months in the house of correction yesterday by Judge J. Chew Sheriff in Laurel branch of county police court. Chaney was charged with assault and battery on his wife, Mrs. Clara Chaney. He also was fined $25 on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Mrs. Chaney told the judge that her husband threatened her with a knife and shotgun and told her he was going to "clear out the house." He was arrested by Constable Frank Hurd, of Laurel, while asleep in a nearby woods.

Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson Renews Fire on Ritchie

Vigorously attacking Gov. Albert C. Ritchie for what she termed scandals in his administration, Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, of Chevy Chase, told a meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union yesterday afternoon at Baltimore that the Democratic women of Maryland will defeat the governor in his race for a fourth term.

"Let me warn those newspapers in our State who supported the Tammany candidate in 1928 that we warned them then what would happen and they refused to heed our warning and were beaten by 78,000 by a dry candidate," she declared. "History is about to repeat itself. Maryland voters do not relish being classed as a nullification State."

$30,000 DELINQUENT TAX SALE IS STAGED

The annual sale of delinquent tax property was held yesterday at Rockville by J. Forest Walker, Montgomery County treasurer. The sale disposed of approximately 350 pieces of property upon which taxes had not been paid, valued at approximately $30,000.

Mr. Walker said that he could not give a definite figure on the actual value of the property, as the checkup would take several days. Most of the property was bought in by the county.

The property can be erdeemed at any time after 60 days have elapsed through the office of the clerk of the circuit court by payment of the delinquent taxes and interest to the date of sale and 10 per cent per annum additional interest from the date of the sale, according to Mr. Walker. The treasurer said that the tax sale this year is unusually low, in his belief.

Poison Is Found Hidden in House

Woman, Former Occupant, Now Serving Term in Son's Mystery Death.

Baltimore, April 14 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Hidden in the rafters of the former home in Havre de Grace of Mrs. Hattie Stone, now serving an eighteen-year sentence, Homer Daugherty, the present occupant, today found a package containing more than a pound of poison, sufficient to kill hundreds of people, chemists say.

Daugherty recently moved into the House, which was vacated when Mrs. Stone was convicted of manslaughter in connection with the death by poisoning of her 16-year-old son, George, and sentenced to the Maryland House of Correction.

Mrs. Stone's mother-in-law, father-in-law, husband and elder son died from one to several years before the death of George Stone and before the family moved to the house now occupied by daugherty. After Mrs. Stone's conviction the house remained unoccupied until recently.

VAST AREAS BURNED IN VIRGINIA FORESTS

50,000 Acres Laid Waste but Fighters Assume Upper Hand.

PUBLIC CARE IS URGED

Richmond, Va., April 14 (A.P.).—Fire fighters on far-flung battle lines were believed to be gaining headway tonight in their fight against forest conflagrations in Virginia, which since Thursday are estimated to have swept over approximately 50,000 acres of timber lands in twenty counties.

An appeal was made today to Gov. Pollard by Chapin Jones, State forester, to urge the people of the State to exercise extraordinary care to avoid further fires. Hot weather and high winds, he said, have created one of the most dangerous forest fire situations in the experience of the State forest service.

"Forest wardens and all available help have fought fires to utter exhaustion in many sections," Forester Jones said. "New and more disastrous fire outbreaks may occur at any time unless rains occur."

Fires today crept close to at least two villages, another had burned over more than 10,000 acres of land to grow into what wardens believe the largest fire in the State, and still another was reported during the day to be gaining rapid headway in sweeping along the slope of Black Mountain, of the Purgatory range.

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 14.—While the Shenandoah National Forestry headquarters here tonight reported all of the half dozen forest blazes in the Government reservations under control, the Blue Ridge Mountain fire in the area of the proposed Shenandoah national park continues to rage.

Intermittent showers late today aided the fire fighters in the National Forest, but did not reach the Blue Ridge, which now has burned over 10,000 acres, surrounding the converging point of the boundaries of Rockingham, Augusta and Albemarle Counties. More than 100 men are battling along a 15-mile fire line.

The forestry service still has a large force at work on the Fridleys Gap blaze in the Massanutten Mountain, near Harrisonburg, which has burned over 3,000 acres of the National Forest and 1,000 acres of private land. This blaze is under control and the showers aided in checking it.

Cumberland, Md., April 14.—Several hundred Bedford County citizens, under the direction of Inspector Clyde Lambert, members of the Pennsylvania constabulary and State troopers, were called out yesterday to assist State foresters in combating forest fires spreading rapidly in the mountains adjacent to the Maryland line.

The fire, which had been raging several days, yesterday was given impetus by a brisk wind and after having burned over about 600 acres, was spreading rapidly.

Leonard W. Palmer, 30, Is Dead in Martinsburg

Manslaughter Charge In Auto Death Dropped

Charges of manslaughter which had been preferred against Morris Spikloser, 1419 Chapin street northwest, as the result of an accident in which Frank E. Young, 46 years old, Laurel farmer, met his death, were nolle prossed yesterday by State's Attorney Clarke, of Howard County. Spikloser's bond of $1,000 was released.

Mr. Spikloser was held for action of the Howard County authorities by a Baltimore coroner after he took Mr. Young to St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore. The accident took place March 31 near Savage, Md.

VIRGINIA'S HIGHWAY ACCIDENTS INCREASE

Careless Driving Blamed for Almost One-Half Reported Mishaps.

SPEEDING NEXT CAUSE

Richmond, Va., April 14 (A.P.).—Careless driving was the most destructive factor in Virginia highway accidents which last year cost the lives of 146 persons, injured 1,129 others and resulted in 918 instances of property damage, it is shown in a review made public here today by H. G. Shirley, State highway commissioner.

There were 1,667 accidents reported and 817, almost one-half, resulted from careless driving, the commission found. Careless driving caused 87 of the 146 deaths, and resulted in 725 of the 918 instances of property damage.

Next to careless driving, speeding was the most potent agent in the accident record, causing 27 deaths, 187 injuries and 105 instances of property damage.

Increase in Accidents.

Driving under the influence of liquor caused seven deaths, 28 injuries and 14 instances of property damage.

There was a sharp increase in accidents and their resultant damage in 1929 over 1928, when 88 persons were killed, 717 injured and 475 pieces of property damaged in 884 accidents, or a little more than half the number of accidents last year. Taking into the State highway system of 40 per cent more mileage is given by the commission as the reason for the rise, and also the fact that a more accurate count of accidents was made with the aid of the motor vehicle commissioner.

The report attributed 6 deaths, 23 injured and 7 instances of property damage to grade crossing accidents; 5 deaths, 54 injuries and 35 instances of property damage to defective equipment; 9 injuries and 7 instances of property damage to improper lights; 12 deaths and 8 injuries to persons walking in front of cars; 1 person was found dead on the right of way; 1 injury to a tree falling on a car; 1 injury to a person falling off a bridge; 1 injury to the driver's suffering an epileptic fit; 1 instance of property damage to a large rock rolling on the highway; 2 instance of property damage to cars burning on the highways; 3 instances of property damage to horses killed by cars, and 1 instance of property damage to a farm gate left open on the highway.

Mileage Increase Factor.

"The increase of traffic and of mileage and better reporting have increased the total accidents reported over other years, but it is the opinion of the commission that relatively the accidents have decreased," said a statement signed by Mr. Shirley, commissioner; Wade H. Massie, secretary; I. Walker Truxton, H. G. Gilmer and W. H. East, members of the highway commission.

"Analysis of the various causes of accidents will show that careless driving plays the most important part. This has been constantly reported for a number of years, and clearly demonstrates that much educational work must be done to inform the driver of the proper traffic requirements and to make him more careful in operating."

Car Crash Quiz Urged By Cumberland Judge

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 14.—In his charge to the grand jury today when the April term of circuit court had convened, Chief Judge D. Lindsley Sloan recommended that the jury investigate into the number of fatal accidents resulting from automobile crashes in the county. He cited that there had been five in recent months in which a coroner's jury, after its investigation of each case, recommended that the operator of the machine be held on the charge of manslaughter, for the action of the grand jury.

The court said these killings and injuries on the roads and streets could be only attributed to reckless driving, speeding and nonobservance of the traffic regulations.
